Jim! How is the bud! I'm pretty damn good!! Jim happy about you. Anyway, enough about me. Good luck in everything you do. I hope that you are one of the sweetest guys that I have ever met.
 I love her and treat her the best that you can. Be good and always believe the way that you do. You are a terrific person!! one of the best Jim. Well, I guess I now. I love you and so do I. Better go for fun. Stay sweet.

1 Panther Trail

A glance through a local telephone directory will produce addresses like Washington Street, First Street, Walnut Street, and the inevitable Main Street. A great number of names will be listed with county road numbers or rural routes with box numbers running into the hundreds.

And then there is Knightstown Junior-Senior High School.

Once claiming North Eastview Drive as its address, the school changed addresses in 1979 when the 1½ block-long street was renamed Panther Trail. As the only building officially located on the street — and the only one ever likely to be — 1 became the significant street number for KHS.

For all its singularity, however, Knightstown High School holds a student population hovering around 765, a faculty and staff of 67, and a world of activities.

Oh, Mr. Postman!

Mail sent from Knightstown High School leaves the main office twice a day and passes through the Knightstown Post Office mailroom.

Report cards mailed at the end of the year and deficiency reports sent out in the middle of each six-week grading period present the largest single mailings from the school. Most letters go to Knightstown addresses, yet postal addresses for students include Arlington, Carthage, Greenfield, Shirley, Spiceland and New Castle.

It is not just the main and guidance offices which have kept the postal system busy. The library and the academic departments order books, supplies and equipment to use in the classrooms. Mr. Boler's ACE program and the journalism classes regularly send letters to businesses working with the school. Miss Berkebile's junior high social studies students write letters requesting information from various locations.

Add to these letters a weekly average of five rental films which come and go within a matter of days and it equals a bundle of mail with a 1 Panther Trail return address.

Around 10:30 U.S. mail carrier Bob Johnson appears with KHS' daily delivery.

"Neither rain nor sleet . . ." prevents the daily sight of the postman's car in front of the school.

Some days it takes a large mailbag to hold all the mail delivered to the school. On other days a simple rubber band holds the mail for Mrs. Schram to sort.

Did I Get Any Mail Today?

Despite postal rate hikes which raised first class mail postage to 18¢, an average day will see close to 50 pieces of mail delivered to Knightstown High School by mailman Bob Johnson. Monday mail deliveries, however, average over 100 pieces, according to Mrs. Phyllis Schram, office secretary.

The bulk of the mail consists of library-bound magazines and letters; of what remains, 50% could be considered "junk." Besides the flyers addresses to Coach and Sponsor, letters addressed to Resident might appear in any teacher's mailbox. Not only do teachers who last taught 15 years ago get mail, but letters also come addressed to Charlie Beard and even Mr. and Mrs. Knightstown High School.

"Mail" inside the school is a lot less confusing. Daily announcements and absence lists are distributed to each room by office helpers. Occasionally the guidance office will send notes or passes via aides to students in classes. Some notes, written "illegally" during a class, are passed through the "grapevine" during or between classes.

Packages arrive almost daily, usually via afternoon United Parcel Service deliveries. Sometimes, especially at the beginning of the school year, large stacks of boxes can be seen inside the main entrance awaiting delivery to the right persons.

When one considers the volume of letters, magazines and packages coming into KHS as well as the amount of notices that circulate through the building, it all stacks up to a lot of mail at 1 Panther Trail.

Once the library magazines and letters are sorted out it's up to Mrs. Schram to get the mail delivered to the teachers' mailboxes.

Daily announcements and absence lists are delivered in the morning by office helper Gretchen Wood.

Dear Student,

We've been keeping track of you for a year now, and you've really had us busy! You've been working hard doing a lot of different things! You have been putting on plays and musicals to entertain people as well as getting all dressed up and going to dances! How have you found the time to do it?

We realize you've also been spending time just relaxing and taking life easy! We can see why you'd need time to relax after all of the running around you've done. We understand that you need time to relax. After all, it's not easy to lead a student's life.

The bell rings and in less than ten minutes the last person is on the bus ready to head for home.

Never are students more anxious to board a bus than at the end of a school day, especially when it is the last day of school.

Oh My Gosh! The Bus is Here!

Early every morning, through sun, rain, fog, snow and sleet — school is rarely stopped because of the weather — the school buses lumber along the roads of southwestern Henry County and northwestern Rush County to transport students to school. As early as 7 a.m. some students are already headed to KHS via the school bus.

If you're not hit by a paper wad by the time you sit down, consider yourself lucky. To make matters worse, there is always a third grader one seat away who has not yet learned to talk without screaming.

Depending on where you live you can have Marion McFarland or Carol Colclazier as a bus driver. They assign seats and enforce rules such as no cokes or skoal on the bus. Although they try to enforce these rules they aren't always abided by.

In the morning everyone is still half asleep and no one really has much to say. But in the evening everyone is awake, in a hurry to get home and talking so much you may not be able to hear yourself think.

The only time the morning ride isn't boring is when you have homework to finish, but it never fails: the minute you finish writing the last word of your English paper the bus hits a bump and your pen flies across the paper leaving an indelible trail.

There are two days in which stand out as "fun" bus riding days. The first is the day after Christmas vacation. The older kids are wearing the best clothes they got for Christmas, but no matter how careful they are, they always slip and fall on the ice.

The other favorite day is the last day of school. There is less noise at a rock concert. You can do anything you want the last day. The driver sits smiling and looking straight ahead. He is counting the minutes until he can get home and remove his earplugs.

Young love is not always a bed of roses; Mortimer and Elaine (Bob Myers and Laura Hollowell) have a lovers' quarrel.

Without realizing Mortimer is really in trouble, officer O'Hara (Brian Drumm) proceeds to tell his mother's life story.

The unannounced visit of deadly nephew Jonathan (Chris Sitler) and side-kick Dr. Einstein (Eddie Eickhoff) lead to more murder and mayhem in the Brewster household.

The naive but lethal Brewster sisters, portrayed by Tammy Wade and Holly Burgess, give their last victim (Dave Edington) a glass of poisoned elderberry wine.

A "TASTE" OF 1940 IN 1980

Suddenly, it was 1940 again! The Victorian living room furniture, the little old ladies in their long lacy dresses and, of course, the elderberry wine were at KHS. But why? It was the opening night of "Arsenic and Old Lace"!

After weeks of hard work the Speech and Drama Club was finally prepared to perform the production. On the evenings of November seven and eight, crowds filed into the KHS student center to view the mystery/comedy.

Aunts Abby and Martha portrayed by Tammy Wade and Holly Burgess, kept the hilarity flowing throughout the show with their innocent but lethal, antiés. Putting lonely old gentlemen out of their misery by offering them poisoned elderberry wine is not exactly one of the norms of society.

The rest of the Brewster clan were not exactly normal either! For instance, cousin Teddy (Roger Kilmer) who presumed himself to be Teddy Roosevelt had a habit of burying yellow fever victims in locks in the Panama Canal, which was in fact the basement.

There was also long-lost cousin Jonathan Brewster (Chris Sitler) who showed up with his sidekick, zany Dr. Einstein (Eddie Eickhoff).

The only really normal couple in the play were cousin Mortimer Brewster (Bob Myers) and his young fiancée Elaine Harper (Laura Hollowell). These young sweethearts' life together was threatened when Mortimer discovered the dirty deeds his aunts had performed.

All worked out well in the end when Aunts Abby and Martha and nephew Teddy all agreed to go to Happydale Sanitarium. Creepy cousin Jonathan was arrested by the police. This left an open door for Mortimer and Elaine's happiness to blossom.

A feeble Mr. Gibbs (Marc Armstrong) is forced out of the house by hysterical Mortimer before he becomes victim #13 of Aunt Abby.

Thinking he is Theodore Roosevelt, Roger Kilmer charges the "blockhouse."

Double Vision

When people think of twins they think of two people who look and act exactly alike. This is not always the case. Twins often have totally different interests and hobbies as well as different friends.

KHS boasted three sets of twins: seniors Rick and Marcia Nation and Juniors Jody and Judy Palmer and Fred and Tina Reeves.

Life can be hard for a twin. The twins interviewed said they were constantly being compared to each other in the ways they acted, looked, thought and dressed. Jody Palmer said she and her sister had been constantly compared by people who said, "Well, you don't look or act anything alike."

Sometimes, too, they have to put up with ridiculous comments. Marcia Nation explained that she had even been asked repeatedly if she and her brother were identical twins.

Speculation of life without a twin brought varied responses. Some, like Rick Nation, couldn't imagine a non-twin existence, but another twin commented that "it's like we're not twins; we're only in the same grade and our names are so much alike."

The feelings of most twins were like that of Marcia Nation: "It's a unique life but I wouldn't change it!"

Mr. Bergmann's lecture in Substance Abuse class holds Fred Reeves' attention.

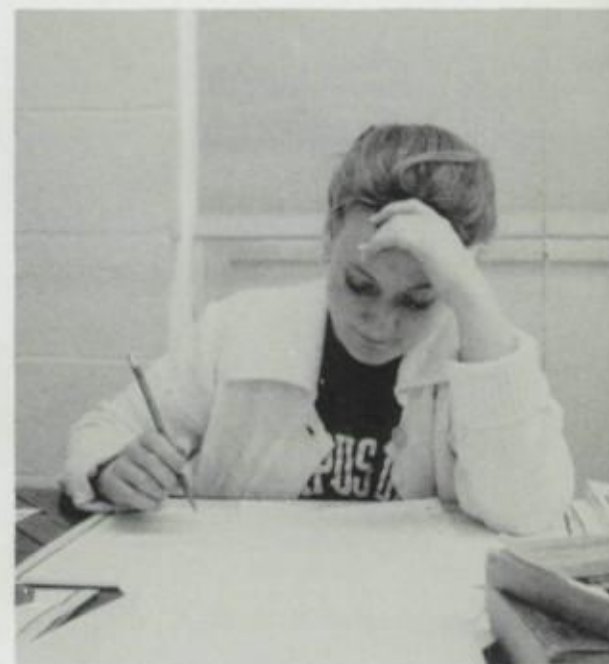

As an active Mat-Mate, Jody Palmer helps ready the gym for a wrestling meet.

In addition to a load of academic courses, Marcia Nation works on assignments for Drafting class which she is taking as independent study.

Time in the library allows Tina Reeves a chance to talk with friends.

As Sports editor for the Galaxy Judy Palmer works to make the copy for the volleyball pages sound good.

Study Hall gives Rick Nation time to get some homework done.

Makes Me Want to SHOUT!

The decor of the Student Center, November 15, set the mood for approximately eighty-five couples to be "Lost In Love." Many of those who attended said this year's Jr.-Sr. Dance was the best in years.

It was a night of "fun and festivity!" Of course music and dancing were part of the excitement, but refreshments and conversation added to the events of the evening.

The dance floor was crowded on almost every song. WNAP's Freddie Fever played, be it fast or slow. Songs played ranged from the soft sounds of Air Supply to the rowdy rhythm of the Blues Brothers.

One of the highlight dances of the evening was "Makes Me Want To Shout" by Otis Day and the Knights. The seniors seemed to take control of the dance floor, and as the beat got louder and stronger the people got wilder and crazier!

As the evening drew to a close, Freddie Fever dedicated "Another One Bites The Dust" by Queen, to the class of 1981. The final song of the evening, "Theme From The Muppet Show" sent all happy couples out the door with smiles on their faces and skips in their steps.

The handing out of Jr.-Sr. Dance pictures is an important part of going to Jr.-Sr. Miss Hall distributes portraits to seniors Rusty Addison and Dan Brown.

"Self service" was obvious at Jr.-Sr. Dance as Ron Hamilton and Scott Morgan help themselves to a cold coke.

Dancing can be tiring; therefore dancers need time to rest and talk!

The theme for this year's annual event was the basis for the decorations done by the seniors. These two silhouettes uphold the theme "Lost in Love."

Food, glorious food! The snack bar was a popular place during Jr.-Sr.

Small Town, U.S.A.

Believe it or not, there is more to life than Knightstown, Kennard, Carthage, Shirley and Grant City! To most this is a fascinating fact indeed!

Most KHS students have grown up in the Knightstown area and really don't realize there is a great big world out there to see. They are content in knowing the people they know and going to the places they go.

Some, on the other hand, realize they have a world open to them and are going crazy to get away from their hometown to see the real world. They gripe and yell because they want to leave and can't.

But there are disadvantages to living in a small community. Everyone does seem to know everyone's business and good gossip isn't hard to hear or make.

There are advantages, though. Small communities are cleaner and safer than cities. There seems to be more of camaraderie between the citizens of a small community.

Even though everyone has complained at one time or another about living in "nowhere, U.S.A." deep down we're probably happy to live in our very own "Mayberry."

Grain elevators and churches help give towns that small-town hominess so many have grown up with. This grain elevator plays an important part in Kennard's skyline. Also, signs welcoming visitors and extending invitations to people to attend their churches are quite common.

Two vehicles pass by while the rest of the town of Shirley seems to be taking an afternoon siesta.

Quiet afternoons are the norm in Carthage.

Main Street, U.S.A. is a popular saying to those who have grown up in a small town. the tranquility and character of Knightstown is made obvious just by looking down the thoroughfare.

Road signs indicating which direction to take to reach a particular town or city are littered across the U.S Since Grant City isn't even located on most road maps, signs like this one are badly needed to some who aren't familiar with its location.

Up With The Sun

R-I-N-N-N-G! That's the blood curdling sound the alarm clock makes every morning to beckon students, teachers, and administrators to another day of school. For most, that dreadful "clang" comes all too early.

Reporting to physics class at 7:00 a.m. is part of the morning routine for twelve students. Roger Kilmer states, "Mr. Holmes makes it fun and keeps me awake. It's worth getting up for." Mr. Holmes has been hired by the school system due to the low number of physics/math teachers. The rest of the day Mr. Holmes teaches at Eastern Hancock.

Students are not the only ones whose routines begin at daybreak. Teachers, administrators and even secretaries are plagued with the early morning hustle and bustle. Efficient Mrs. Schram's whole day is thrown off track if she has to answer the phone. Talk about to-the-minute timing!

Some people seem to have time to waste. The hallways are crowded from 7:50-8:00 a.m. with people "walking around" or standing against the walls gossiping.

Behind the closed door of the teacher's lounge, the teachers congregate before they begin their day of teaching. Mr. Purtee claims while sitting in the lounge before school he "sings a few hymns and raffles off a couple of turkeys."

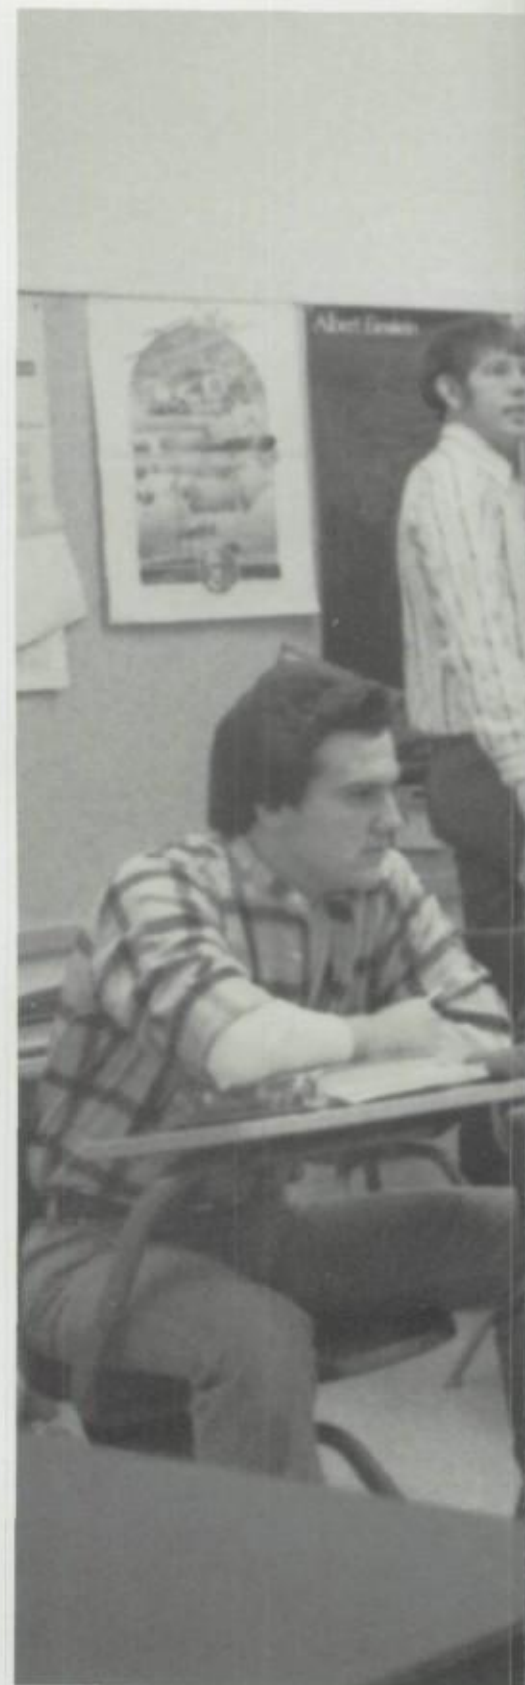

Waiting for the rest of the crowd to arrive are freshmen Bill Brock, Brian Jones and Brad Ratcliff.

Have you ever wondered who puts the menu up for each day? Well, here's your answer, Angie Barnes!

Before taking their place in the hallway, Mike Moss and Ron Hamilton hang up their coats.

These students seem to be awake although they have to be in physics class by 7:00 a.m. Believe it or not, they make it to class without toast and toothbrush in hand!

Mrs. Maxwell doesn't get to sleep either. One of her early morning bookstore duties is counting change.

This classroom seems to be a refuge for these early morning chatterers, Debi Johnson and Kathi Thompkins.

A dozen roses were awarded to Diane Winters as the new Rally Day queen.

A bonfire was one of the activities prior to Rally Day. Kenny Sullivan and Eddie Hager are among the many students who came to watch.

Tears greet Scott Turpin as he escorts the new Rally Day queen, Diane Winters off the football field.

Escorted by senior class president, Scott Turpin, is Teresa Hall, the 1980-81 junior class princess.

Rally Day: Homecoming KHS Style!

What's always the most fun-filled weekend of the football season? Rally Day of course! And this year was no exception.

The bonfire "sparked" the events of Rally weekend. Temperatures dropped and the wind blew hard but faithful Panthers showed up for the KHS tradition.

In addition to the traditional bonfire were a few new activities. Crazy sock day was added as was crazy hat day.

A door decorating contest let clubs, organizations and classes show their spirit and support for the Panthers. First place honors went to the F.F.A.'s "spread em out and plow em under" door. Second and third place doors were done by the Drama club and the senior class.

Another tradition, the queen contest, was conducted differently. Instead of each class choosing a representative of their own, three juniors were nominated for princess and three seniors for queen. At half-time of the football game senior Diane Winters was crowned the new 1980-81 Rally Day queen. Teresa Hall was chosen to be princess.

The finale of Rally Day was the Panthers' match-up with Morristown. The feeling in the air was one of anticipation and excitement. The was one of a kind but the Panthers came out on top with a score of 26-24.

During half-time activities, Sonya Peggs, one of the three Rally Day queen finalists, is chauffeured around the football field by Tom Armstrong in his 1954 Corvett.

Lending a helping hand is Brian Drumm as he helps the student council prepare for the bonfire.

Preparing for the ride around the football field is Michele Spears, one of the three queen finalists.

That's Entertainment

The show must go on — or so the saying goes. Bake sale, athletic game, newspaper, dance, graduation: they're all "shows" of one kind or another.

Each event is rated on the basis of the finished product; little consideration is given the planning, practice, and plain hard work which go into any public appearance or production.

The Art Club's successful "Movie Night" required planning months in advance to set the date and select and order the ideal movies for a Halloween showing. Likewise, although the bulk of the physical labor occurred in a few short days, work on the prom began with a super magazine-selling effort in September.

Those well-padded football players could not rely solely on their pads to see them through the season. Regular workouts on the weight machine insured sound muscles to help carry out the plays.

Sometimes even the participants in the event don't realize what goes on to making it possible. The clockwork smoothness with which the presentation of diplomas occurred would have been impossible without the hours Mrs. Schram and the senior sponsors spent in organizing the diplomas and checking them for correct spellings.

Between scenes during dress rehearsal for The Sound of Music, Marian Carrow finds a soft drink and a magazine helpful in passing the time.

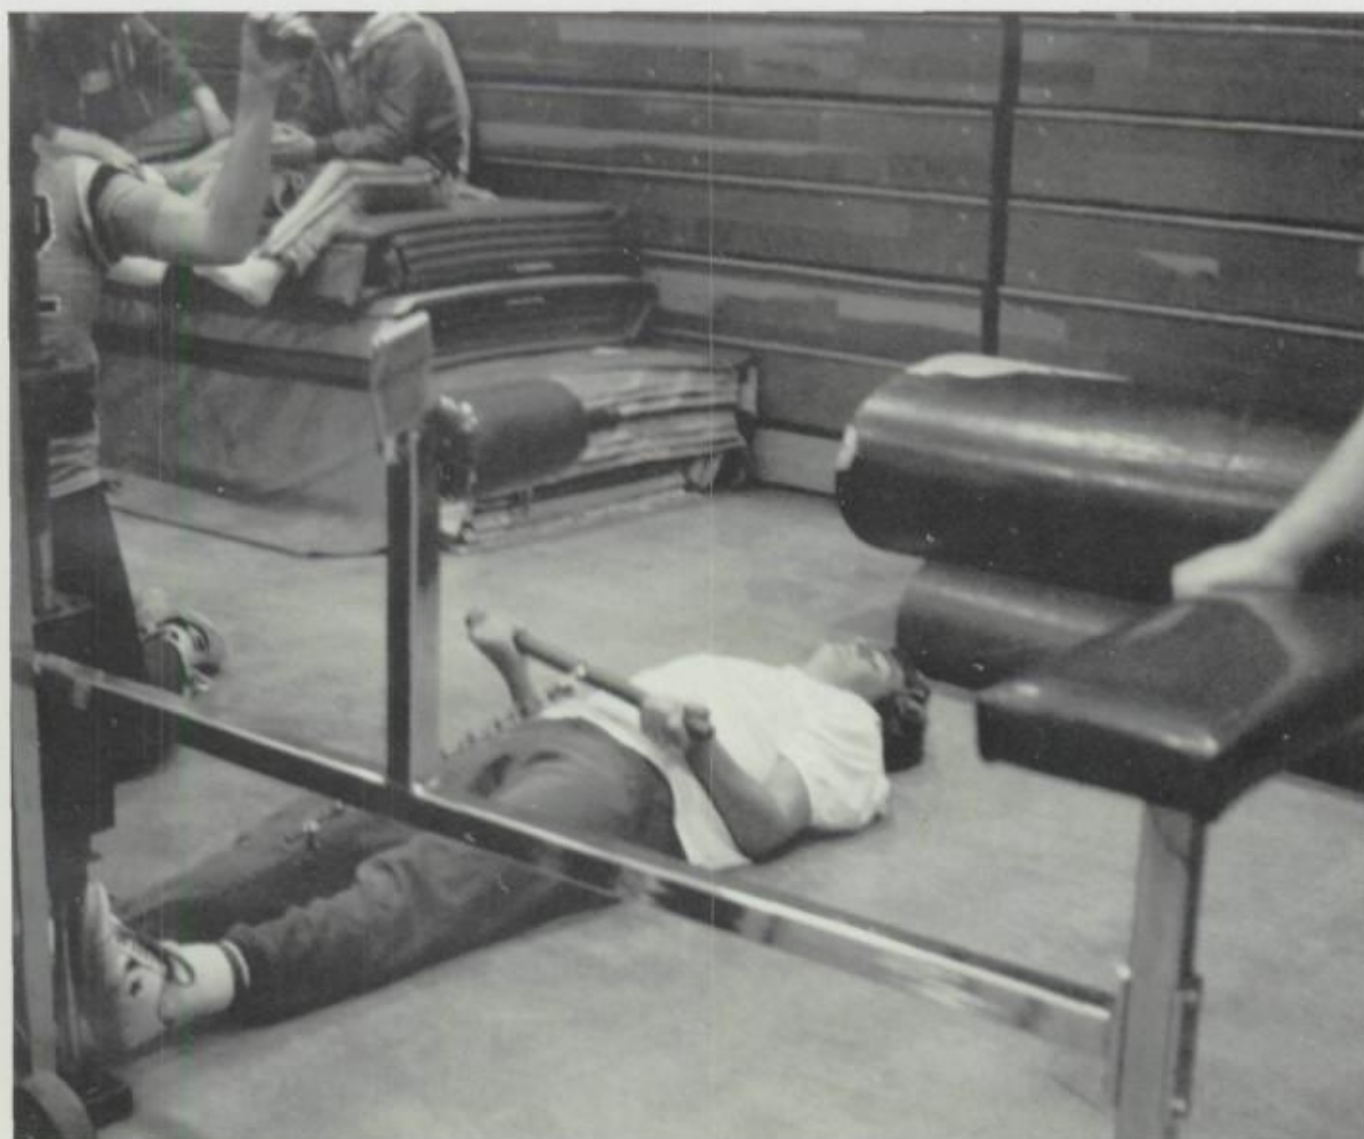

The "crazies" occasionally strike and bring relief to the seriousness of classes. Cindy Hahn assists Mrs. Smith in donning her attire before Freshman English class.

Crossing the gym floor can be hazardous for any junior not alert to the crepe paper streamers being stretched for prom.

Bob Myers and Mrs. Purtee discuss his ratings between rounds of a speech meet.

Convocations featuring groups such as the Twosome Transfer give the student body a chance to be the audience and not the performers.

Football field feats require toned muscles. A workout on the weight machine helps Mark Haase prepare for gridiron action.

Politics and Religion Make News

Politics and religion are only a few of the major 1980-81 stories that will soon grace the pages of every U.S. History book. Even in the Knightstown area the weekly Tri-County Banner had several surprising events to report.

When school opened in August the U.S. was knee-deep in a heated presidential campaign. The November election resulted in a Republican sweep with Ronald Reagan soundly defeating Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter. Even before the polls closed in California Carter had conceded the election to Reagan.

Thanks to groups like the Moral Majority, conservative Republicans gained several seats in the House and captured control of the Senate for the first time in over 20 years. On the state level, Robert Orr moved from lieutenant governor to governor in a race against Democrat John Hillenbrand, and Republican legislators filled the state capitol.

Yellow ribbons sprouted across the nation as the 52 American hostages in Iran were finally released on January 20 after 444 days in captivity.

Gunshots upset the political, religious and entertainment scenes. A December shooting killed former Beatle John Lennon in front of his New York City apartment.

Two other assassination attempts fortunately were less successful. These were against President Reagan in Washington, D.C. and Pope John Paul II in Rome. Both men were hospitalized for gunshot wounds.

KHS had its own excitement. Only a few days after workmen installed new glass doors on the southeast side of the building, the glass was shattered.

A late night prank-turned-sour involving several seniors occurred only a few days prior to graduation. As they attempted to place an outhouse atop the awning on the south side of the building, the awning buckled. Repair costs were paid by the students, however, and graduation went on as planned.

Superintendent William Smith inspects the damage to the new school doors which were installed during spring vacation.

Accused of shooting the President on March 30, John Hinckley Jr. is moved from the Federal Correctional Institution at Butner, N.C., after undergoing psychiatric tests.

Joined by his long-time friend Charlton Heston and First Lady Nancy Reagan, the President greets a crowd of supporters.

The south portico was damaged during a prank on May 11.

Pope John Paul II traveled to Japan and the Philippines but then was restricted to Vatican City after being injured in an assassination attempt on May 13.

S-P-I-R-I-T Spirit—Wear It!

Who is that walking the halls of KHS? An insane person who enjoys wearing sweatshirts, ties and shades? Why, no! It's just a KHS student during spirit week.

The week began with tie day. People then came to school on Tuesday in ties and their cool shades. Wednesday brought a variety of outfits. Such combinations as Mickey Mouse shades and bow ties embellished the halls of KHS.

Dressing up is a fun part of spirit week, but the biggest competition next to the sectional itself is the famed hall decorating contest. The competition was keen, but the class of 1981 took first place honors for the second consecutive year!

Seventh grader, Angie Sloan, hangs a poster as she helps her classmates decorate for spirit week.

Crepe paper is an essential part of decorating for spirit week. David Moore adds more to the decor.

Names of sophomores are clearly printed on the wall made especially for them.

Amidst the confusion, the Sophomore hall begins to take shape.

The senior class of 1981 show the hard work and effort it takes to put together a first place hallway.

Mary Wallace checks the texture of the paint before she finishes her poster. Shelly Scott is on her way to lend a helping hand.

"Normal" attire is a rarity during spirit week. Mr. Willard's sixth period U.S. History class models their "funky garb."

The seventh grade works just as hard as anyone during spirit week. As they reach the end of the hallway, their job is almost complete.

Making A Break For It

The average KHS student's life becomes endangered if he dares to step into the hallway at 2:55 each school day. Seconds after the bell rings hundreds of running, yelling people are released from their teaching captors into glorious freedom. All are held within the confines of the same building from 8:25 until that golden moment of 2:55, upon which students go their separate ways.

The most lethal of those released at the bell are those who means of transportation to and from school is the bus. They make their ways to their lockers being stopped by no one! Take care lest you be mangled by a fleeing bus rider.

Many of the freed captives are quite the opposite of the bus rider. They take their time walking down the hall and finally arrive at their lockers. Some even take time to get a coke or chat with a fellow "time-taker" before finally making their way out of the school and their merry way home.

Finally there are those whose last moments in the school don't come until as late as 6:30 p.m. These are the athletes. Girls as well as guys stay to run laps or lift weights for everything from softball to wrestling, tennis to track.

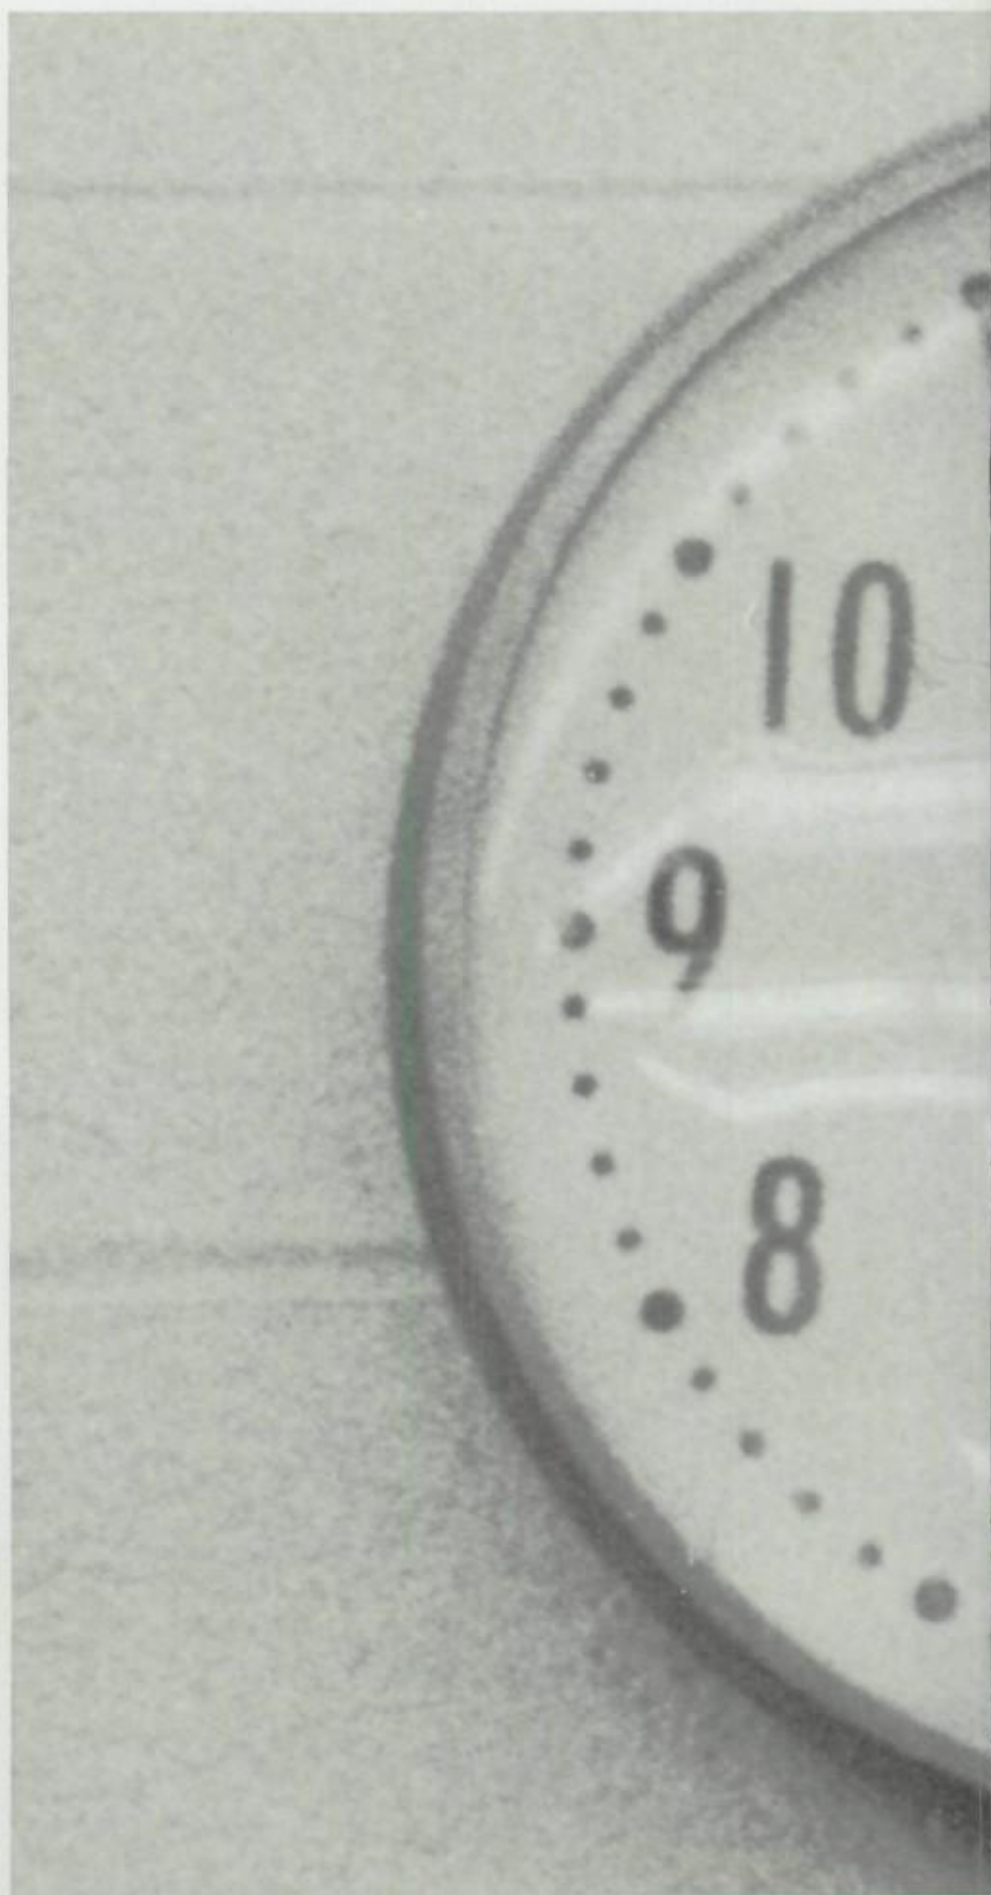

No matter when you leave school it always seems to be an important part of the day!

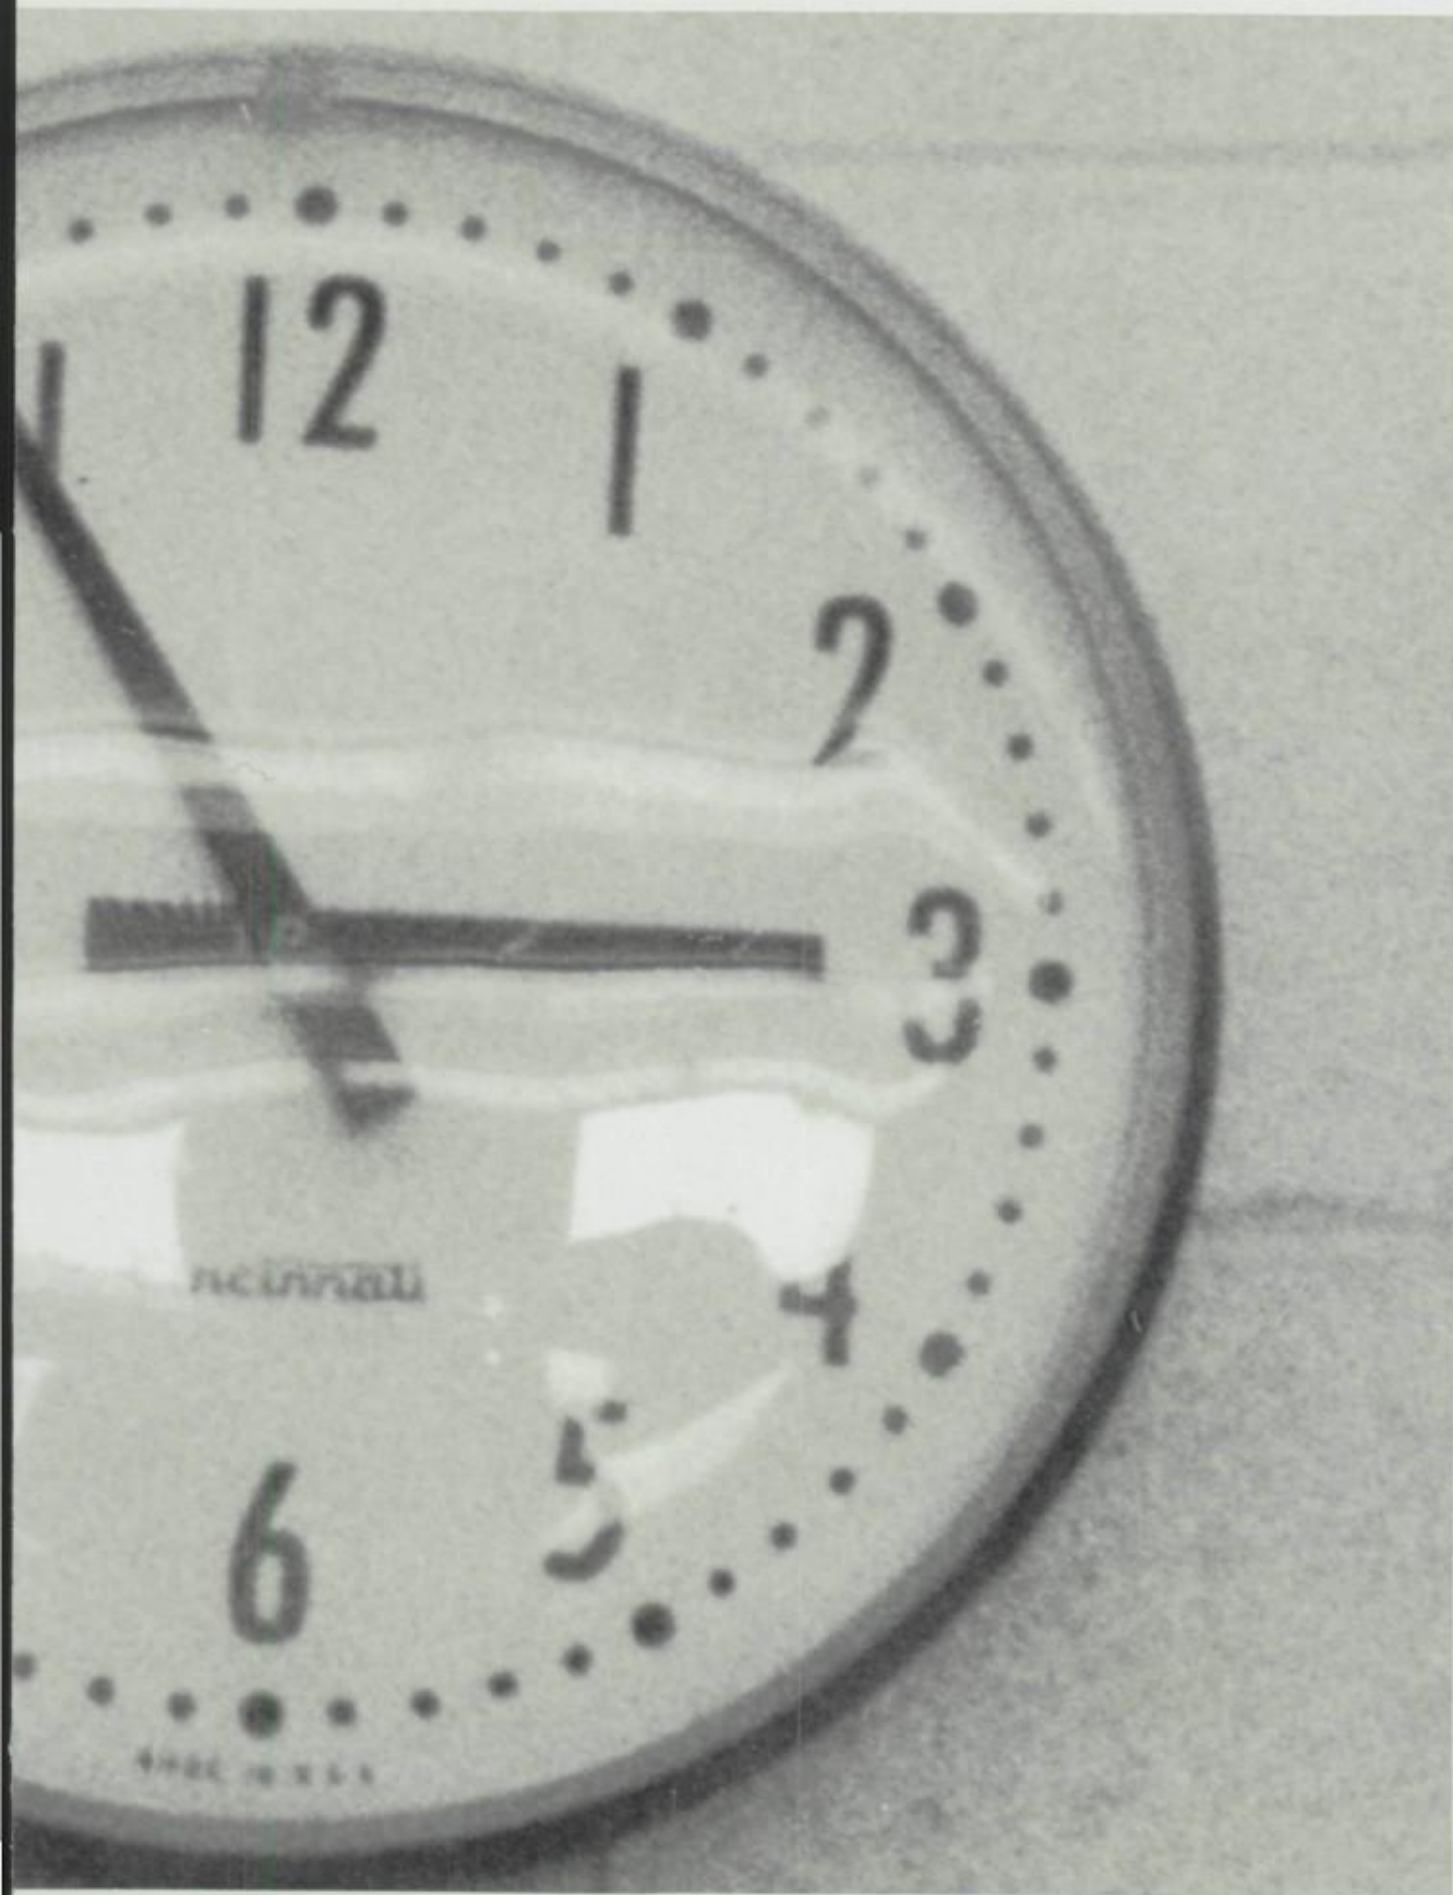

Students wait each school day for 2:55. This begins life after school!

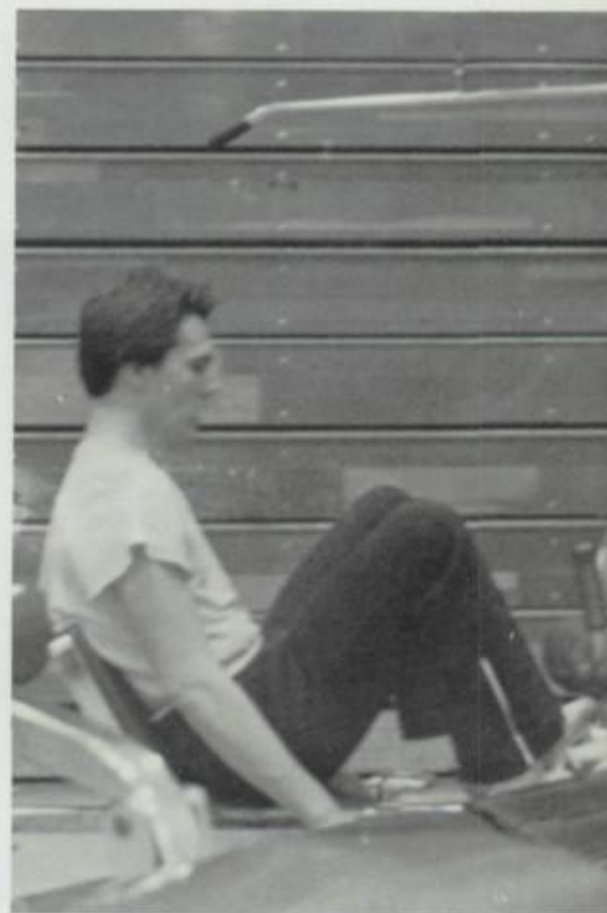

While slowly finding her way out of the building, Margie Pile takes a "Coke" break after school before heading home.

The cafeteria is a popular place after school. Judy Palmer and Mrs. Purtee work on plans for the fall play.

Hall decorating for spirit week is something that definitely has to be done after school. Dana Queener paints a sign in support of the boys basketball team.

A work-out on the weight machine after a hard day of school is relaxing for Greg Clark.

For these girl tennis team members, life seems to get tougher after school!

Sometimes life after school involves doing nothing! Mrs. Collins gets caught catching up on the daily news.

A variety of whirling rides attracted youngsters like Mr. and Mrs. Bergmann's son, Corby.

Most midway games required a good aim. The one Judy Palmer tries demands quick reflexes.

Enjoying themselves, but also on the lookout for unsuspecting eighth-graders, Jody Palmer, David Wallace and John Cox stroll down the midway.

'Whopper' Parade

Kicks Off Jubilee Days

One of the largest parades in Knightstown history headed the Jubilee Days celebration June 2 to 6.

Marching bands from KHS and Eastern Hancock, the Indianapolis Police Department's motorcycle unit, and the Hook's Drugs' calliope were joined by floats, the queen and princess candidates, the sectional-winning varsity baseball team and other groups in the parade. Greene's Funeral Home even had a horse-drawn hearse which attracted the attention of everyone along the parade route.

The Tuesday evening parade wound through the Knightstown streets to the high school where Debbie Steinwachs was crowned queen of the celebration and the KHS band received an award for its parade performance.

The band boosters sold their ever-popular elephant ears along the town square where the games and rides by Poor Jack Amusements drew crowds every night.

The second year for a "battle of the stars" drew area athletes to the high school football field for nightly competition and to the park for a decisive tug-of-war. For the second straight year the "Harold Brothers": Bruce Shelton, Roger Kilmer, Darin Hopping, Marc Armstrong, Steve Gregory, Kevin Kinnaman, Remy Perry and Jeff Moore won the contest.

Most students gravitated to the midway with its games, prizes, rides and food. For the juniors, though, there was the extra attraction of finding eighth graders there and "initiating" them with

A baseball throw and the chance to win one of several prizes captures the concentration of Fred Reeves.

Until the usual evening crowds arrive business is slow for the Knightstown Home Optimist's Club. Mr. Willard is flanked by two other members as they await the customers wanting snow cones, popcorn and drinks.

Staging Aids Musical Success

Outstanding performances in the music department's spring production of the Sound Of Music, drew enthusiastic applause from the standing-room-only crowds at the April 17 and 18 presentations.

Not only were Holly Burgess and Roger Kilmer excellent in their lead roles as Maria and Captain von Trapp, but the members cast in the roles of the Von Trapp children were equally convincing and appealing, including second-grader Erica Bergmann who was enlisted to act the part of Greta, the youngest child. Not to be overlooked was Angie Barnes as a mature Mother Superior and Chris Sitler, the enthusiastic friend and promoter, Max Detweiler.

Enlisted especially for the performances was a string ensemble from Ball State University's School of Music. Under the direction of Mr. William Tatum, choral director, the ensemble blended with the student members of the pit band to give the familiar music a well-rounded sound.

The most crucial problem of the entire production was not the music or memorization of lines but rather the difficult changes of scenery. Ingenuous staging, however, made maximum use of the limited stage area while the twenty different scene changes were smoothly executed thanks to an efficient stage crew.

Pit band members watch and wait for their cue during dress rehearsal.

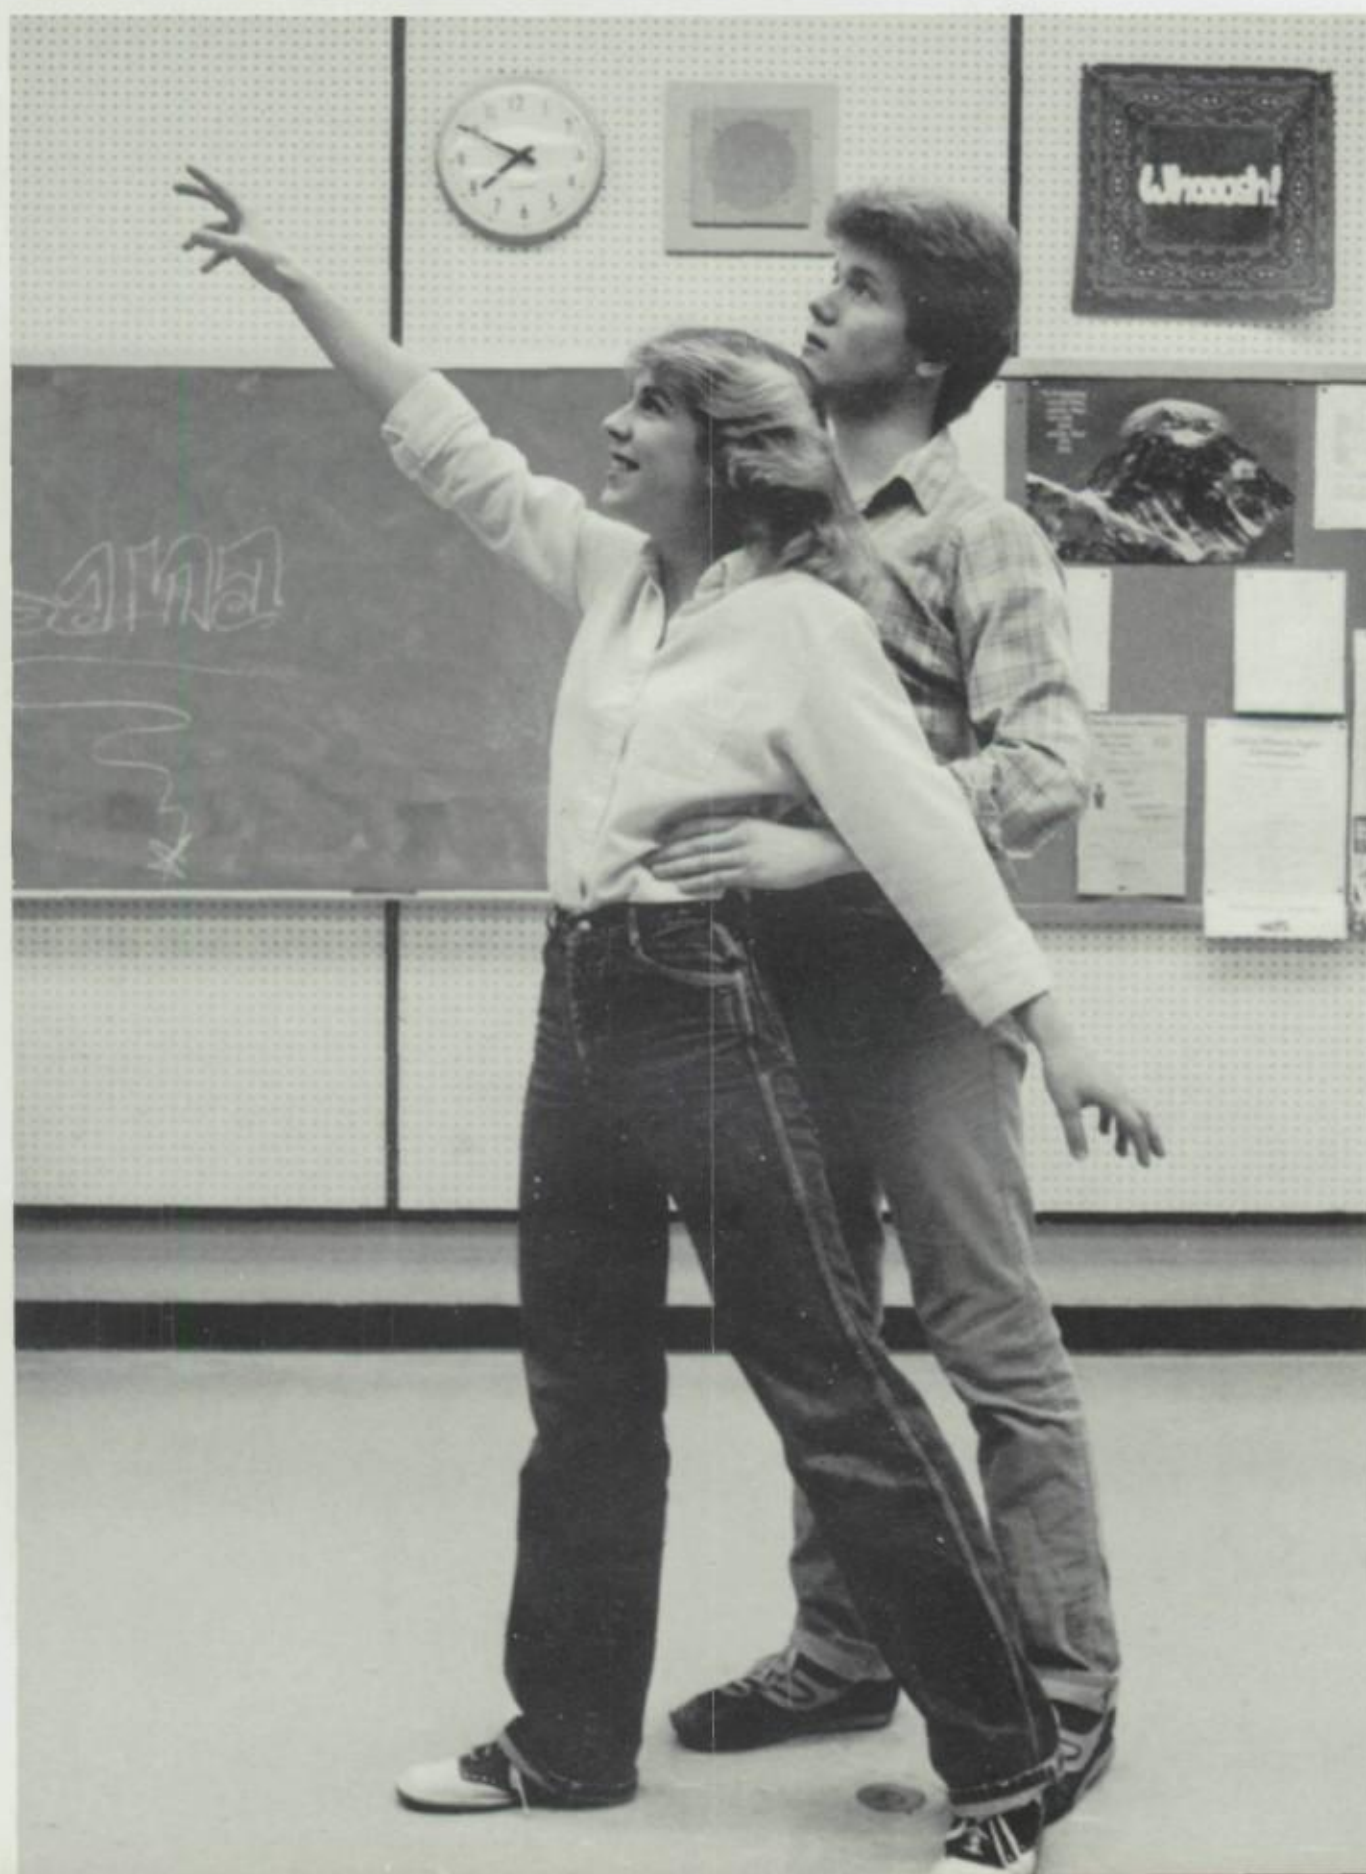

Another day, another practice for Jana Hinton and Chris Sitler who played the parts of Elsa Schrader and Max Detweiler in the April 17 and 18 production.

Practice is a large part of putting a play together, as Eddie Eickhoff and Dana Queener do as the teenage lovers.

Sonya Peggs was one of the many students that received their immunizations at school.

It is final report card time, and Mr. Hayworth is busy putting grades on his students' cards.

Tony Miller and Sara Riley attend Senior Day in the library.

In the awards part of the Senior-Faculty Dinner Mrs. Smith presents Scott Turpin with a card from the faculty to the entire graduating class.

Year End Clutters

The end of school is always filled with many events, especially for seniors.

On May 3 the senior girls went to the Durbin Hotel in Rushville for a breakfast. The senior boys also had a breakfast, but it was held at Thompson's Restaurant on May 7 and was sponsored by the Optimist Club.

The BLT sponsored Senior Day which included a breakfast for all seniors in the school cafeteria and a reception in the library.

New this year, the Senior-Faculty Banquet on May 11 sponsored by the Student Council recognized members of each group. Some seniors even traveled to Kings Island on May 8 for the annual Grad Night festivities.

Although seniors had most of the year-end hassles, other students had them, too. For all athletes who participated in a spring sport, an awards banquet was held on May 13. Athletes from areas like tennis, baseball, golf, and track received acclamation for their talents. For those students who had intellectual qualities the Academic Awards Night was held on May 15.

Class scheduling is always the biggest event at the end of a school year. This year students again decided upon their classes and the period and teacher they preferred, but arena-style scheduling was not used.

Along with class scheduling was the annual visit of the Carthage eighth graders. While visiting the high school the eighth graders vote on cheerleaders, figure out schedules, and get acquainted with the new school.

The biggest hassle of the whole year was the mad scramble for students to get their immunizations. Immunization records had to be updated so that the students could return to school next year.

Last, but certainly not least, was the hassle of signing up and paying for driver's education. It almost appeared as if there would be no driver's education course, but by the last two weeks of school everything fell into place and driver's education was salvaged for another year.

A Special Night

It was unanimous, almost. Prom was nice. The decorations were beautiful and well done and the food was excellent. But post-prom won hands-down as everyone's favorite.

Once again prom was held in the gymnasium, and sponsored by the junior class. "Tropical paradise" was the theme for transforming the gym into a fantasy island complete with erupting volcano. Goliath, the performing band, played loud, fast music except for an occasional slow song, one of these songs being for the prom king and queen, Brian Ratcliff and Sherri White, and their court.

The highlight of the evening had to be post-prom. The theme, "Games People Play," triggered off an ingenious idea from Scott Reeves to transform the school halls into a lifesize Monopoly board. Post-prom-goers were able to take part in a wide range of booths. A couple of favorites were Oriental Gardens, which featured egg rolls and sukiyaki and the Indiana booth which offered a free hat for anyone who hit three free throws in a row.

Thom Kristi of Kiss 99 was the featured D.J. for post-prom. The gym could have passed for a mirrored image of "American Band Stand" as virtually everyone was swept onto the floor to let loose and make 1981's post-prom one of the most participated and wildest dancing events ever at KHS.

For the second consecutive year prom was held in the gymnasium. Prom-goers enjoy the food that was prepared by the junior class' parents.

Prom Court 1981: Amy Rose, Chuck Helms, Michele Spears, Scott Turpin, Sonya Peggs, Greg Clark, Diane Winters, Grant Wilfong, Sherri White and Brian Ratcliff.

The parents worked just as hard as anyone in helping to make prom a success. A group of mothers kept food plentiful at their booth during post-prom.

Ingenious booths like these, featuring the famous "Boardwalk" and "Water Works," were only two of the many booths post-prom-goers were able to enjoy.

Dinner was served buffet style. Here students choose what they want to eat among several dishes.

Keeping with the Monopoly game theme, Oriental Gardens was the idea behind this clever booth which featured a restaurant that served Chinese food during post-prom.

A touching moment shared by graduate Diana Thompson and her mother, Sandra Thompson.

Emotion is high as the seniors waiting to march into the gym, graduates.

Feeling a sense of accomplishment Tammy Whitfield and Jim Williams march out to greet their waiting fans.

I did it!! Seems to be the emotion of Chris Sitler after graduation.

Graduation Is a Celebration

A full hour prior to the 3:30 graduation on May 16 potential alumni started arriving at the school in anticipation of the all-but-too familiar words: "You may now turn your tassels."

Absent from the ceremony itself, however, was valedictorian Melinda Gatewood who elected to participate in the tennis sectional at Connersville while other eligible teammates opted for commencement. In her absence, salutatorian Rick Nation gave the invocation while Brian Ratcliff, class vice-president, read the benediction.

In addition to the all-important presentation of diplomas, Reverend Mervin Kilmer delivered the sermon, class president Scott Turpin addressed all present, and a quartet of seniors sang "You'll Never Walk Alone."

As a special part of the program Pierre Verdier, exchange student from France, spoke briefly of his experiences during the past year. This was followed by a symbolic exchange of gifts with principal Frank Hayes as the entire graduating class gave Verdier a standing ovation.

The song Celebration echoed over the intercom in the halls as the graduates exited the building for a reception under the south portico.

Just before the granting of diplomas Supt. Smith certified the class of 1981!

Penny Schafer tries to hold back the tears that come anyway.

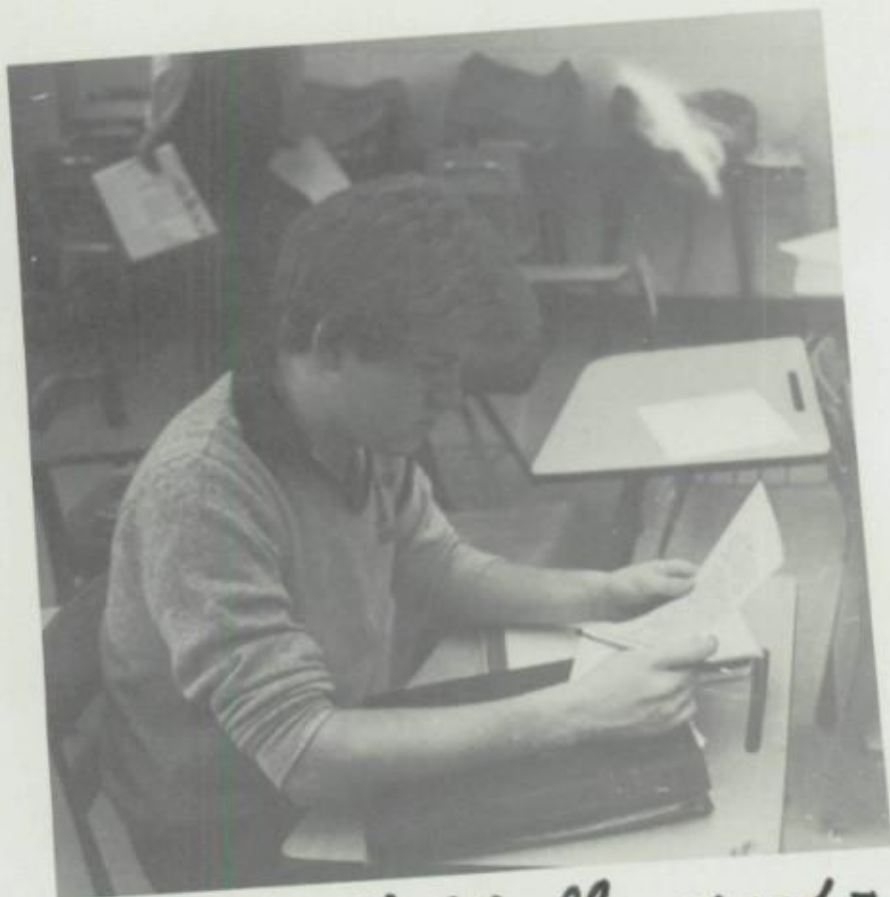

The class of 1981 become graduates. With the turn of the tassels everyone is ready to celebrate.

We don't want to make it seem as though all you have been doing is having fun. The undeniable fact still remains that you have spent a lot of time doing homework.

You have put in many hours of studying. It makes no difference whether you were reading literature, speaking a foreign language, typing letters, learning the functions of nouns and verbs, finding square roots, trying a new cookie recipe, learning of our country's heritage, or writing chemical equations.

The debt for your fun has been paid by the hard work and effort you've given to your classes. You have realized success costs something and hard work is the price.

Languages Speak Out

While most people were stuck in Indiana during spring vacation nine students, Mrs. Cross, and three parents were vacationing in Acapulco, part of a seven day vacation to Mexico. Three days were spent touring Mexico City before they went to Acapulco to soak up the sun and even attend a western disco.

The Spanish classes also made piñatas and cooked tacos as they learned the language and customs of Spain and Mexico.

Mrs. Wallace received a little assistance in teaching in French class from foreign exchange student Pierre Verdier. Although the French classes were small, students and Mrs. Wallace enjoyed a firsthand taste of French culture from Pierre Verdier.

Both sets of foreign language classes made a trip to Ball State in Muncie for a foreign language day.

In the English department things went as usual. The freshmen fretted over Romeo and Juliet and the sophomores complained about Julius Caesar. In Junior English the ever-popular term papers were written, and the seniors enjoyed Macbeth and The Canterbury Tales.

Amongst all this routine drudgery was an interesting change. While Mrs. Keesling took her maternity leave, Mrs. Steinman took her place in journalism and Sophomore English classes and did an admirable job.

Hard at work, Pierre Verdier tries to meet his deadline on spring sports for the 1981 GALAXY.

Two foreign exchange students, attending New Castle Chrysler High School from Argentina and Denmark, join Pierre Verdier in a discussion of their native countries and custom in foreign language classes.

The routine of Senior English class is broken by the extraordinary appearance of Mrs. Smith.

Music Department Always Full of Song and Cymbals

Music affects the lives of everyone, but it's especially important to the members of the choir and band which make up the music department. Music classes give talented individuals the opportunity to develop their musicianship.

Various concerts given by the choirs included the Christmas concert and Spring concert as well as the Broadway musical.

The choir department was honored to have Mrs. Barbara Dennison as a student teacher. With her thirty years of musical experience she helped the choirs achieve charisma by teaching them enunciation, breath control and tone quality.

The band was active during the summer working hard and practicing routines for contest. Later on in the year the band filled the football game halftimes with festivity as they marched across the field.

Junior high choir students start out the day with a cheery note.

Woodwinds play a solo in a song.

Playing the flute is a complicated task; two masters, Lisa Youse and Missy Stewart, make it look easy.

Singing for open house is one of the performances of concert choir.

Under the direction of Mr. Bob Edwards the KHS band prepares for contest.

At the climax of the song, Greg Butler enhances the piece by clanging the cymbals.

Practicing before a performance is essential. Chris Waits and David Edington put their hearts into the song.

Learning Experiences Abound

In Mrs. Shields' classes students had various projects ranging from baking cookies and making T-shirts to designing scale model houses complete with furnishings.

In Child Development Miss Hall's class brought in preschoolers so they could observe actions and interactions of the children. They also attended a childbirth film at Henry County Hospital.

Consumer Ed. classes planned and made meals on restricted budgets while the advanced Foods Class made a Christmas dinner.

"I am glad that P.E.

classes are covering a wide range of activities," stated Shari Alexander, freshman, who experienced firsthand what the class offered. "I thought the gymnastics was more of a learning experience than a skill builder," stated one freshman.

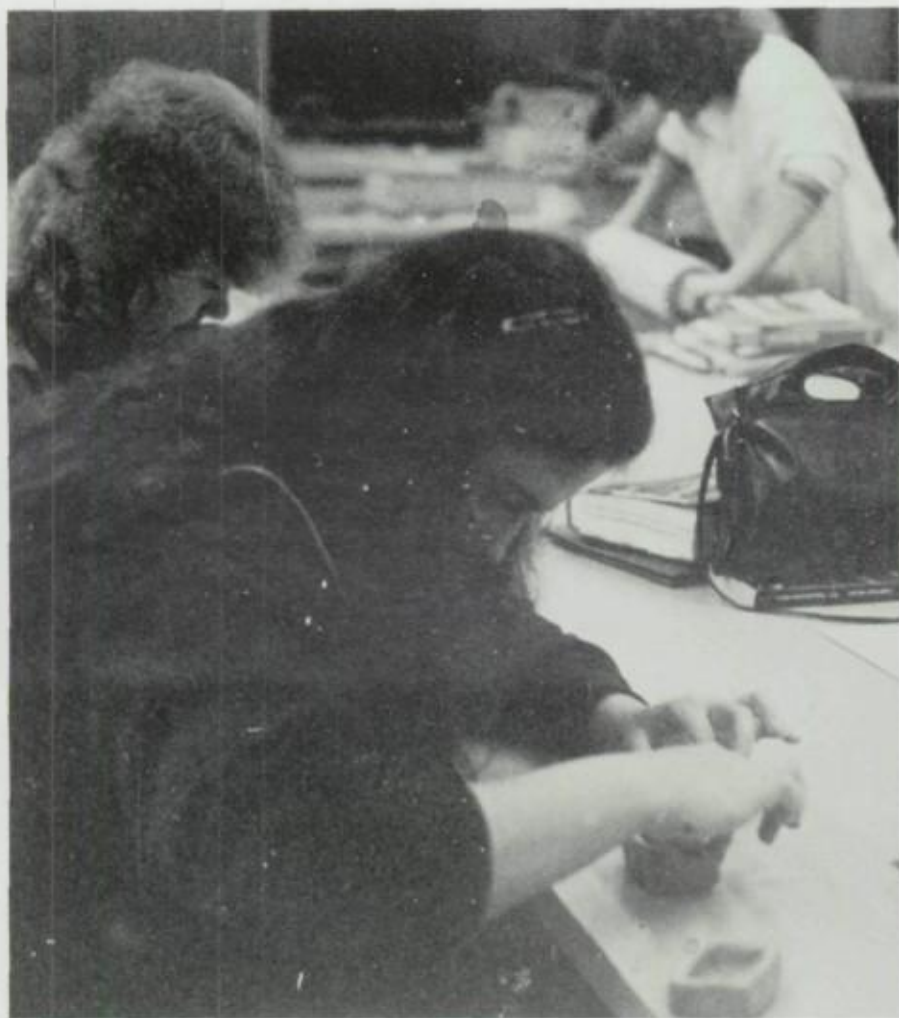

In the fall Miss Freeman and Mr. Wegesin used the nice weather outdoors to teach flag football and softball. During the winter self-protection was taught along with one of the more popular activities: gymnastics. In the spring students learned basic track skills.

Mr. Dukeman's art students undertook many different projects throughout the year. Paintings, jewelry work, pottery, macrame, pencil drawings and weaving were just a few of the options available.

Talented art students drew recognition for themselves and the school in a variety of contests which reaped a total of 15 awards for art students.

Their many outstanding abilities were truly recognized when Dukeman presented the annual Ratliff Award not to an individual but to the entire Senior Art class of 1981.

Molding her clay is a tedious job for Sherri Hoover.

Completing their individual projects, Kelly Wyatt and Teresa Couch find that creativity can be fun.

Mr. Dukeman prepares a mat board for a finished piece of art work.

A rainy day finds the physical education classes playing kickball in the gym. Brian Peggs on base awaits a base kick from a teammate while Mike Vaccaro playing first base and Jacob Smith serves as umpire.

Explaining football to the junior high physical education class is an annual ritual of Miss Freeman and Mr. Wegesin.

The use of maps and an overhead aids Mr. Worell in teaching eighth grade history.

Seventh grade social studies student Tari Sandlin gets to the point when it comes to maps as fellow classmate, Terri Gulley, looks on with awe.

Debates, Projections, and Rejections in Elections.

Election 80 was one of the main topics in the United States because of political and economic pressure; it was the same within the Social Studies department.

All classes studied in depth the election procedure by examining the candidates and reviewing the debates. They "took part in the election" by actually voting by machine for the candidates of their choices.

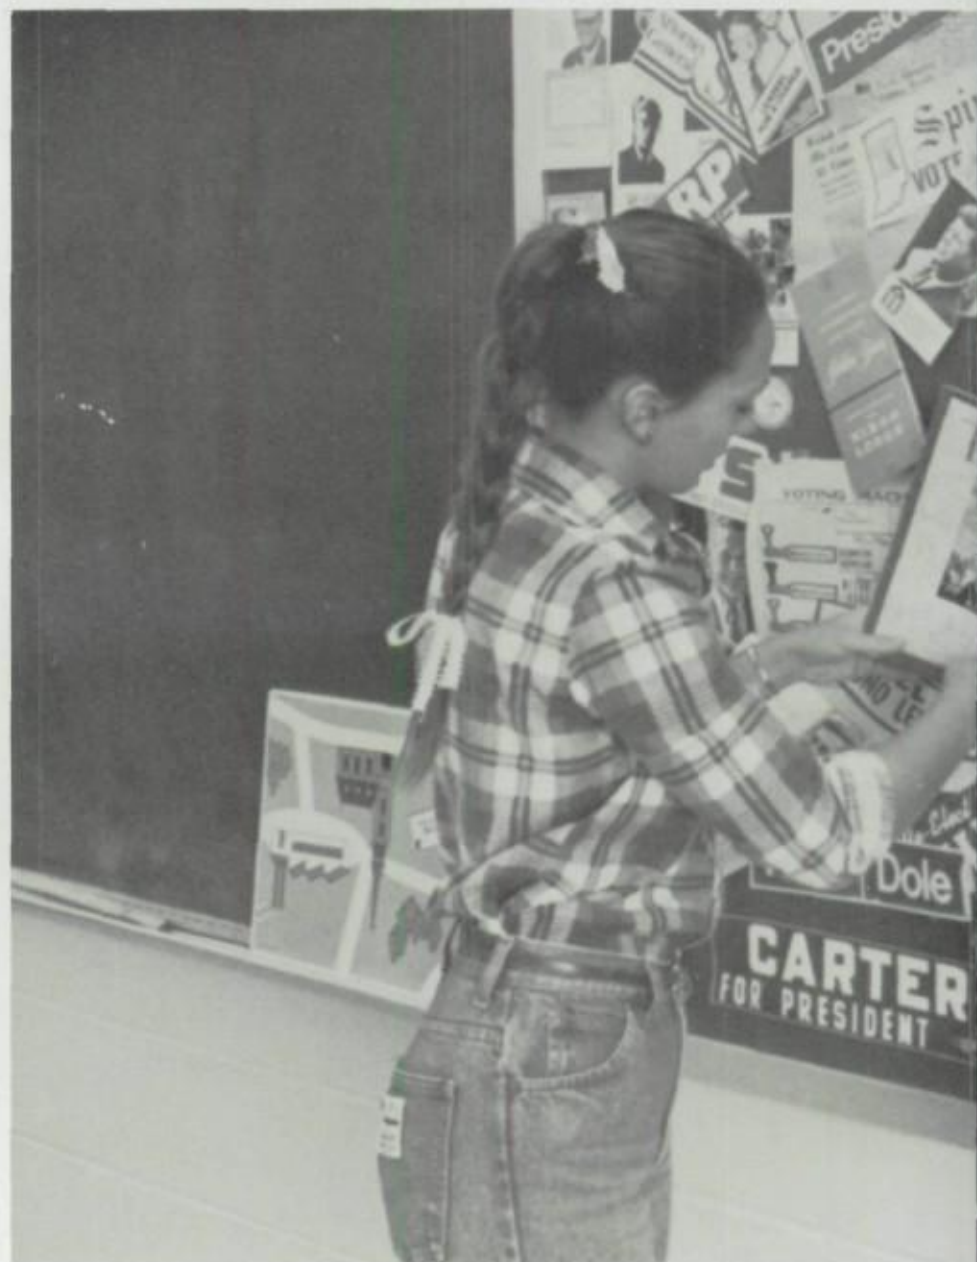

Although the voting percentages did not parallel the national votes, the classes voted a Reagan win over Carter; 397-240. They also "voted" Dan Quayle, Indiana Senator with 330 votes to Birch Bayh's 129 and elected Robert Orr governor with 144 more votes than John Hillenbrand's 237.

In U.S. History class juniors studied the origin of America and her people, presidents, wars, and culture. World History students reviewed the Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish religions as well as many more around the world.

Junior high students learned how and why America fought for freedom. They also obtained knowledge of presidents and America's heritage.

During election time a plethora of campaign literature can be found. Here Laura Halowell adds a cover from Time magazine to the collage of propaganda.

One of the activities in Mr. Byrnes senior government class, was a mock trial. Each student was able to participate like "Baliff" Scott Keen as he swears in "Doctor" Rick Nation while "Judge" Becky Dudley observes.

Order in the Court

All rise for Judge . . . this statement began the trial enacted by Mr. Byrnes' first and third period senior government students.

Through this "mock" trial students learned how lawyers on the prosecution and defense find the facts of a case through asking clever and conniving questions. They found how it felt to be on the witness stand and how important it was to tell "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." They examined the trial process and how the judge came to his terminal decision.

Sometimes being on the witness stand can be a confusing task. Here "Doctor" Sonya Peggs, is interrogated first by defense lawyer Deadra O'Neal and then by prosecuting attorney Chris Sitler.

Career Training Experiences Available

Behind the doors of rooms 26, 27 and 34 lurk a maze of classrooms and a center of activity. This is the industrial education area which offers classes in woodworking, metals, graphic arts, photography, electricity power, and drafting. Combining book work with "hands-on" experiences, the courses offer practical experience as well as room for creativity.

All seventh grade students were required to take a 12 week industrial education survey course taught by Mr. Akers, and eighth graders could choose to take one semester course. The rest of the classes were filled with students taking the specific classes as electives.

A few girls have ventured into the male-dominated classes. Several, like Jennifer Collins, took Graphics Arts or Photography as electives. Amy Ray, the only girl in her engineering drafting class intended to go into interior design so she took the industrial education class for experience. Other girls were enrolled in Beginning Drafting but the numbers were so low that the industrial education area could still be considered a man's world.

The area vocational education program, on the other hand, saw more of a balance of girls and guys participating in vocational programs at New Castle High School or Morton Memorial. This program, designed for students with specific career objectives, offered job training experience in courses ranging from barbering to welding.

According to Mrs. Peg Queener, KHS vocational education director, approximately 30 students enrolled in the program. Several students including Lanny Dean, Gina Black, Donna Reynolds and Nina Butler attended the barbering program at Morton Memorial while Jody Palmer opted for afternoon cosmetology classes at Morton.

The building trades program in which Terry Hager participated remodeled the Knightstown Senior Citizens' Center and built a pole barn to house buses and equipment at KHS.

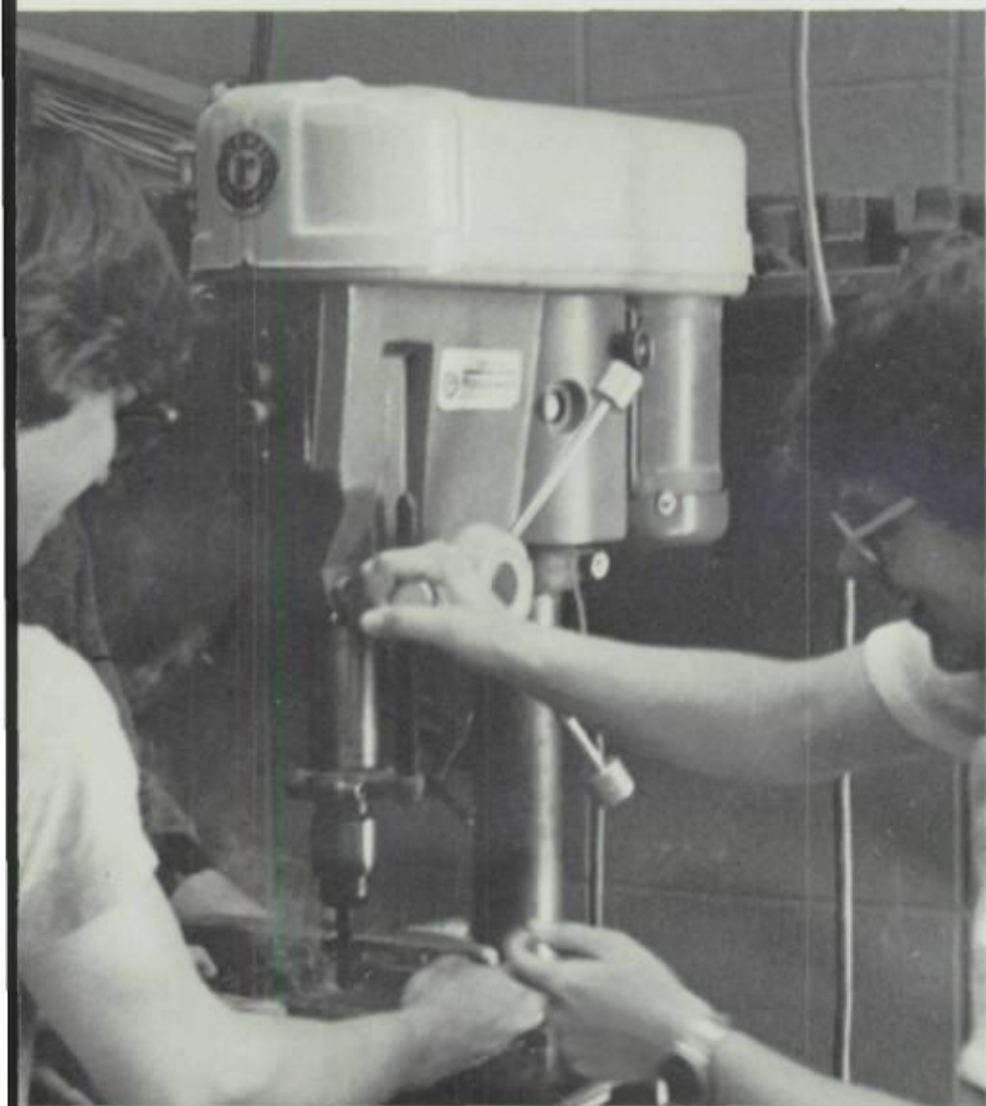

Scheduling seemed to be the only problem the vocational students faced. For some, their classes in the vocational program required that they attend KHS in the morning, for others it was just the opposite. Either way, the students were not at Knightstown all day and, as Jody Palmer stated, they missed some of the activities that went on during the day plus "seeing everyone at school."

A small engine gets a final tune-up from John Heim in Mr. Julian's Power class.

For accuracy and safety it is good to work together on some machinery. Chad McDonald assists Rodney Cox with a piece of wood on the drill press.

The building trades vocational education class from Morton Memorial erected the pole barn on the west side of the high school.

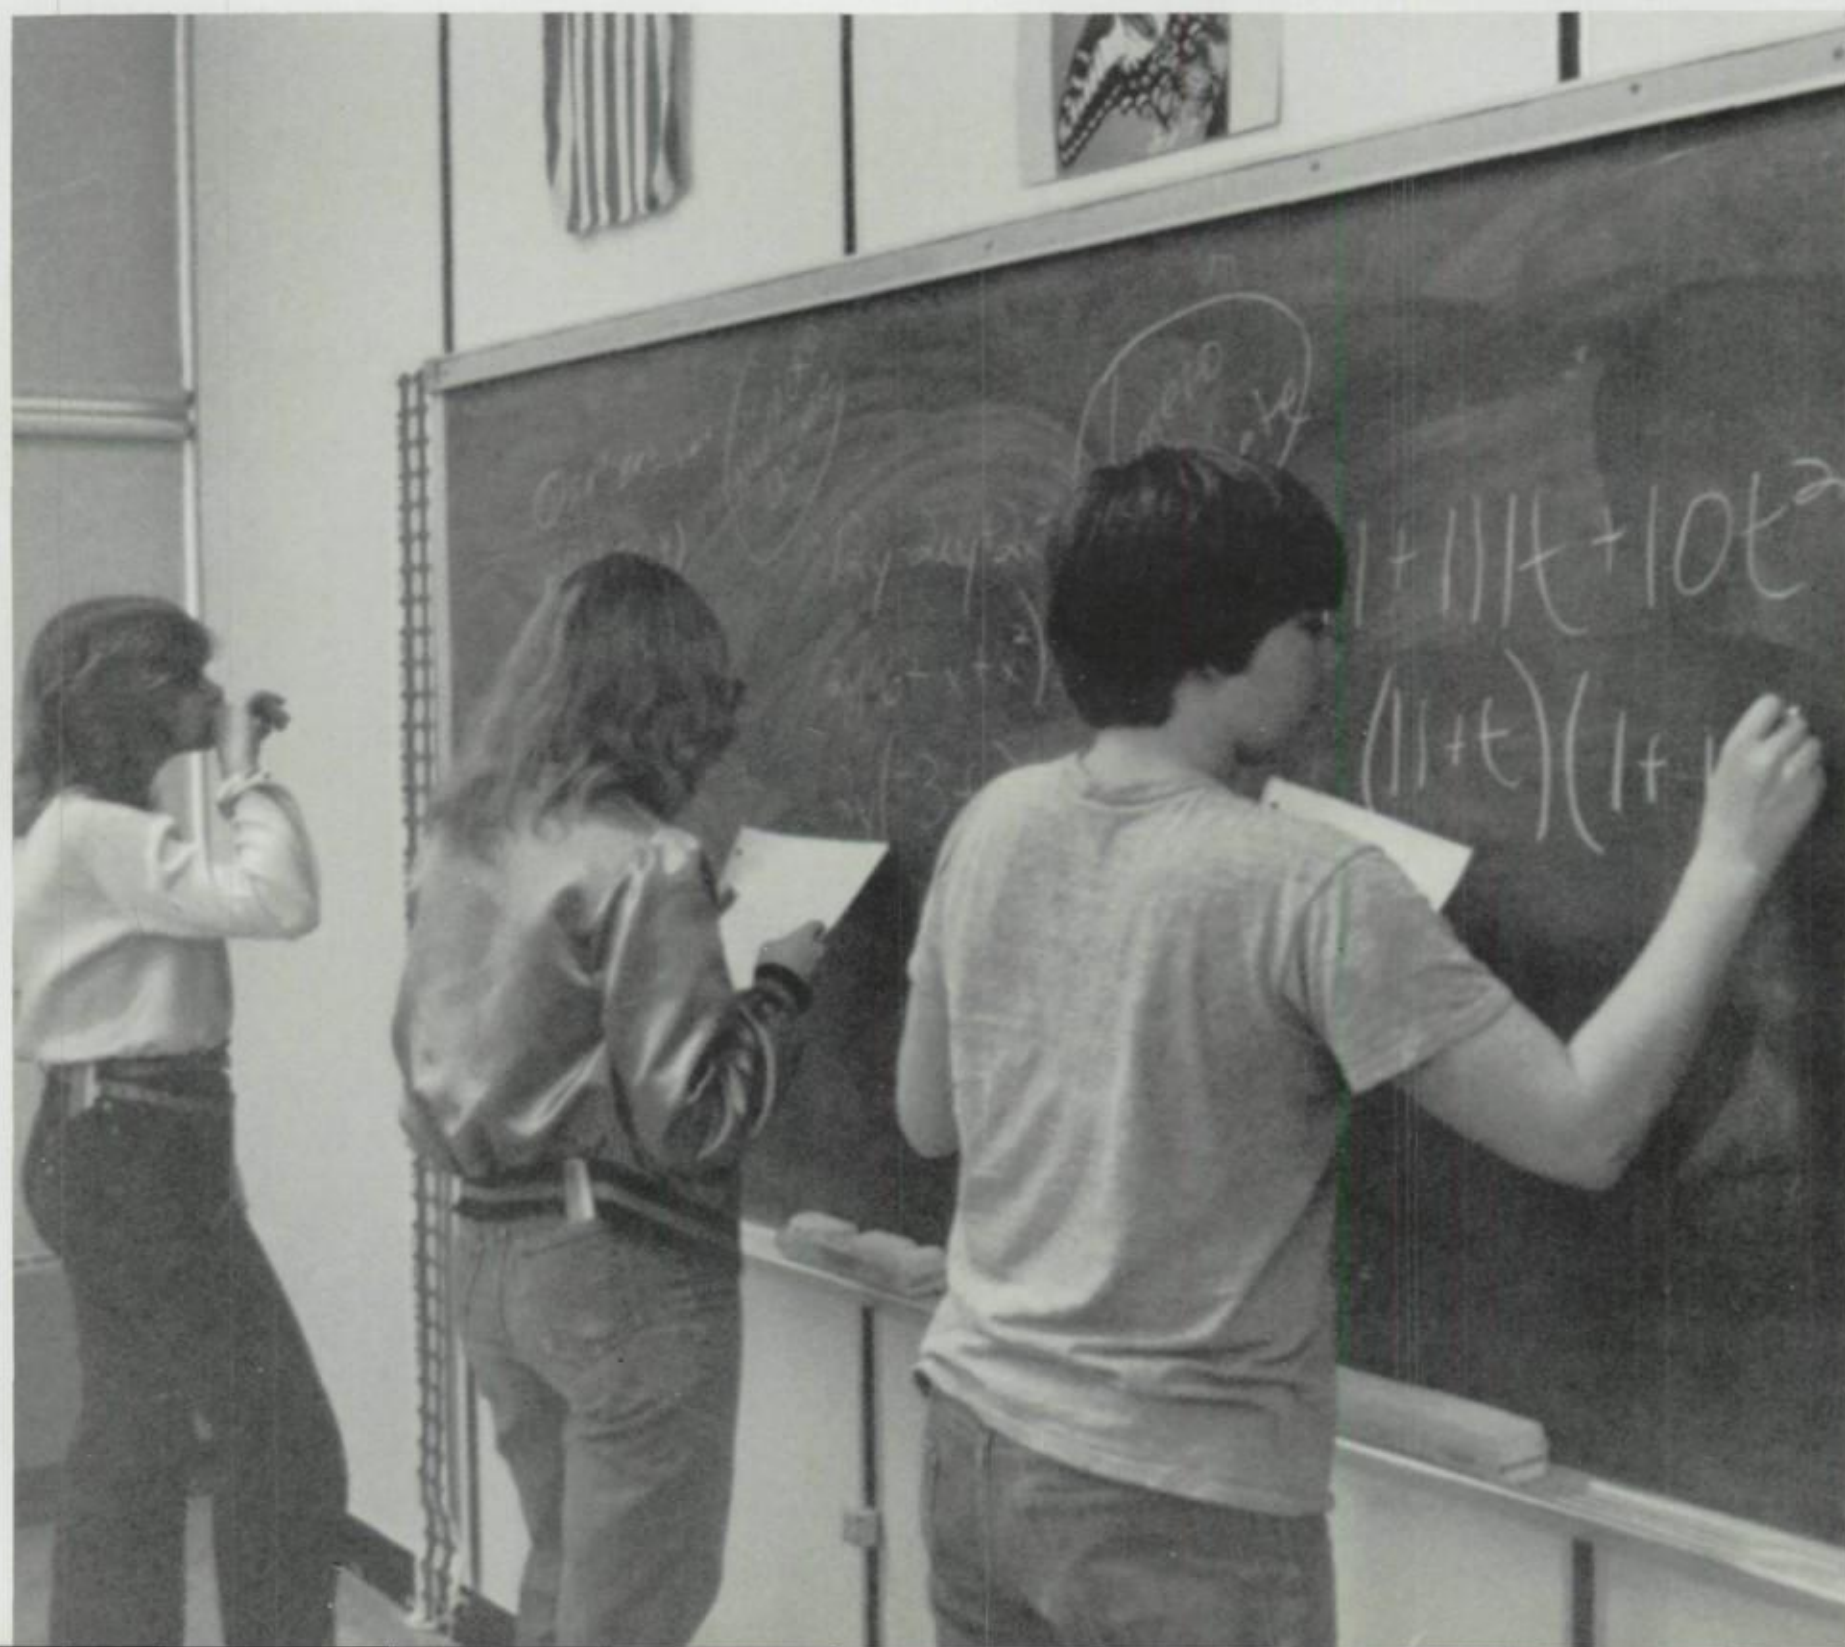

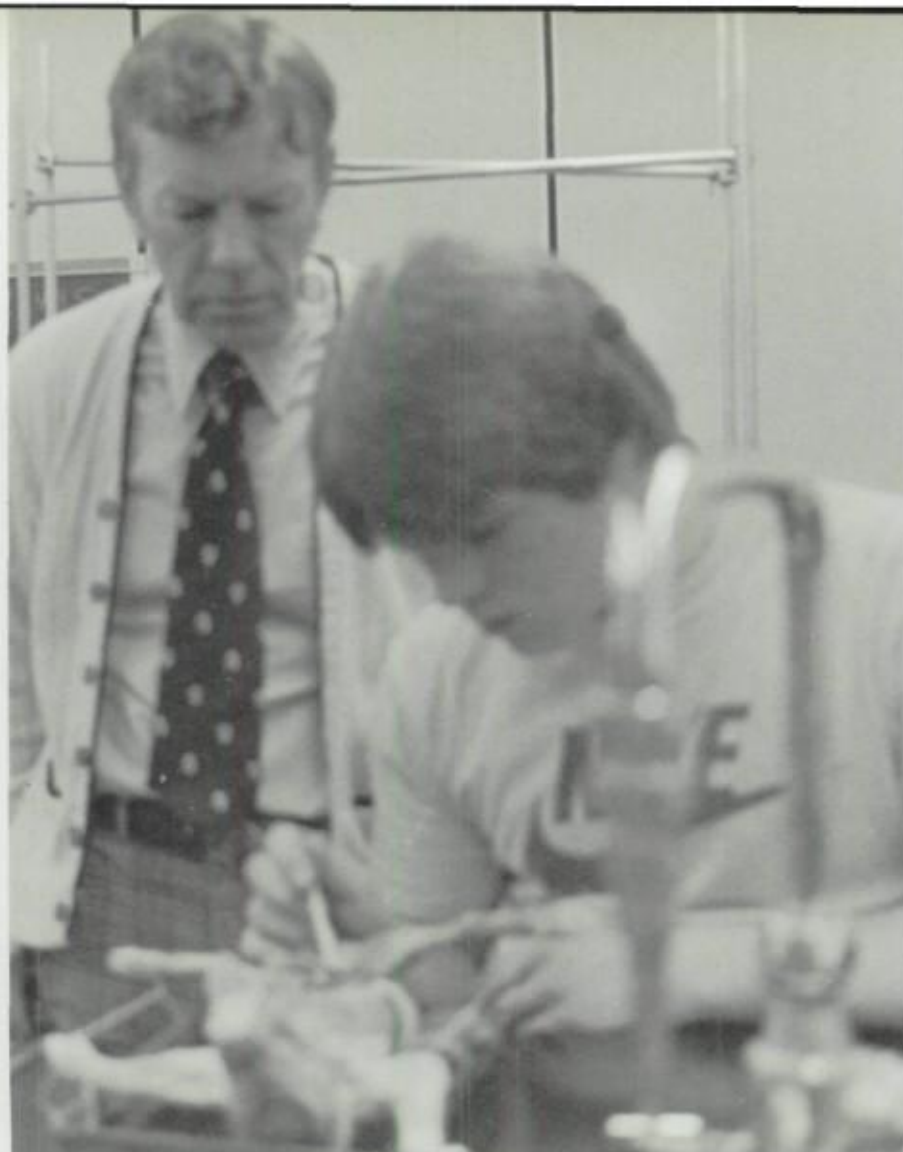

Not able to fit the class into her schedule, Marcia Nation works on drafting assignments as part of an independent study program.

Even pressure is important when turning down a piece of wood on the lathe. Tab Norris stops to check the measurements on this project.

In a business-like manner, Scott Lewis concentrates on figures in Office Machines.

Algebra requires long and gruelling hours at the blackboard. Brent Burton, Kim Beavers and Nisa Arnold chalk up their equations.

Physics for Breakfast?

While chemistry students fought to beat the mole and Mr. Purtee's hard tests, the physics students were fighting off fatigue at 7 a.m. The KHS teaching staff was unqualified to teach physics, so Mr. Holmes from Eastern Hancock consented to teach the class at the only time available: in the morning before first period.

The physics students worked in many labs, studied velocity and acceleration. One of the favorites of the students, however, was the Vandegraph, a ball and pendulum which emitted electricity. Those who took physics found it to be a hair-raising experience.

Solving equations, mastering shorthand and conjugating fractions were a few of the skills learned in the Business and Math departments at KHS.

Students wishing to engage in a business career took classes such as Typing and Office Machines. Accounting and Bookkeeping were favorites among those wanting to become accountants or wishing to manage their own business. Business Math taught the practical aspects of math that would help in life: financing homes, balancing checkbooks, and saving money.

The Math department went more into depth by drawing graphs, conjugating fractions and finding the square root of an equation. Students learned these skills and many more in freshman Algebra. To enlarge the mathematical knowledge students learned of parabolas and hyperboles in Algebra 3 and 4.

Geometry students struggled with theorems and proofs but their hard work paid off when Mrs. Wiatt entertained her classes by playing her viola.

Science courses were not all bookwork, Biology students dissected frogs, earthworms and the more complicated fetal pig.

Sometimes Geometry offers free time for homework; Joe McDonald, Neenah Drake and Mike Reeves get a head start on the assignment.

Diana Thompson and Sherri White practice with dictaphones.

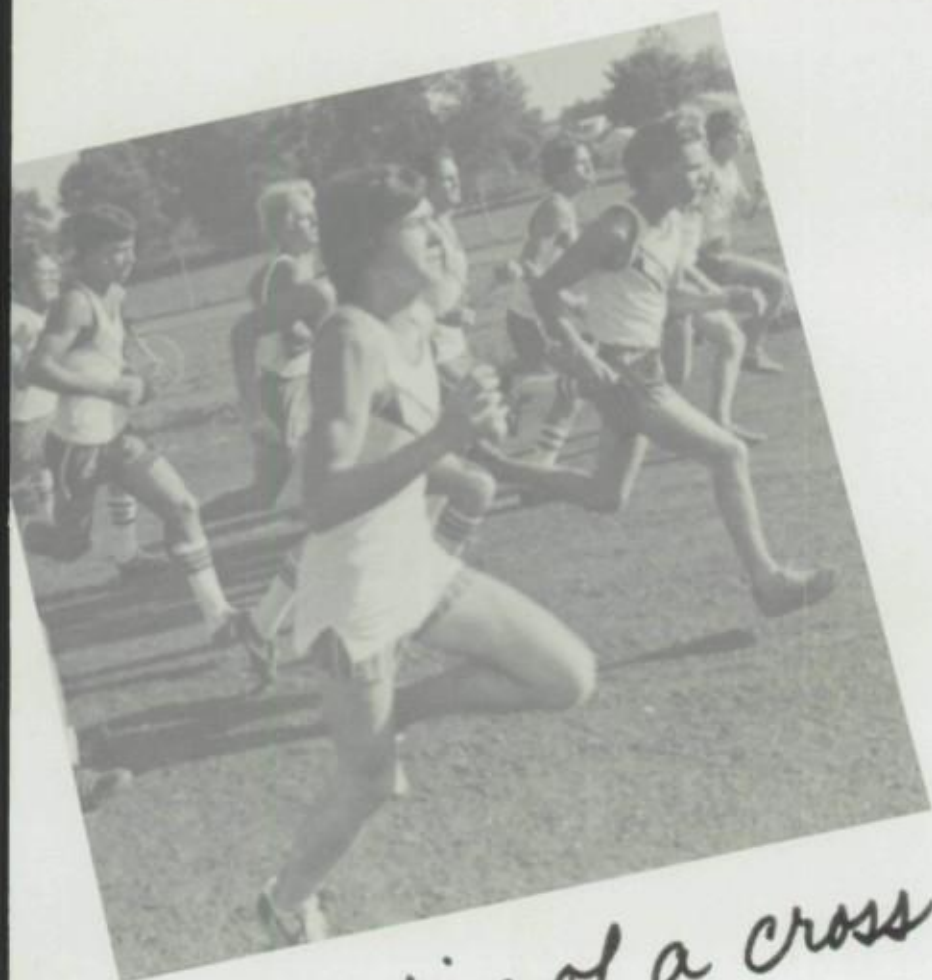

Learning to use stencils is part of the office machines course, as Tammy Whitfield and Judy Anderson learn.

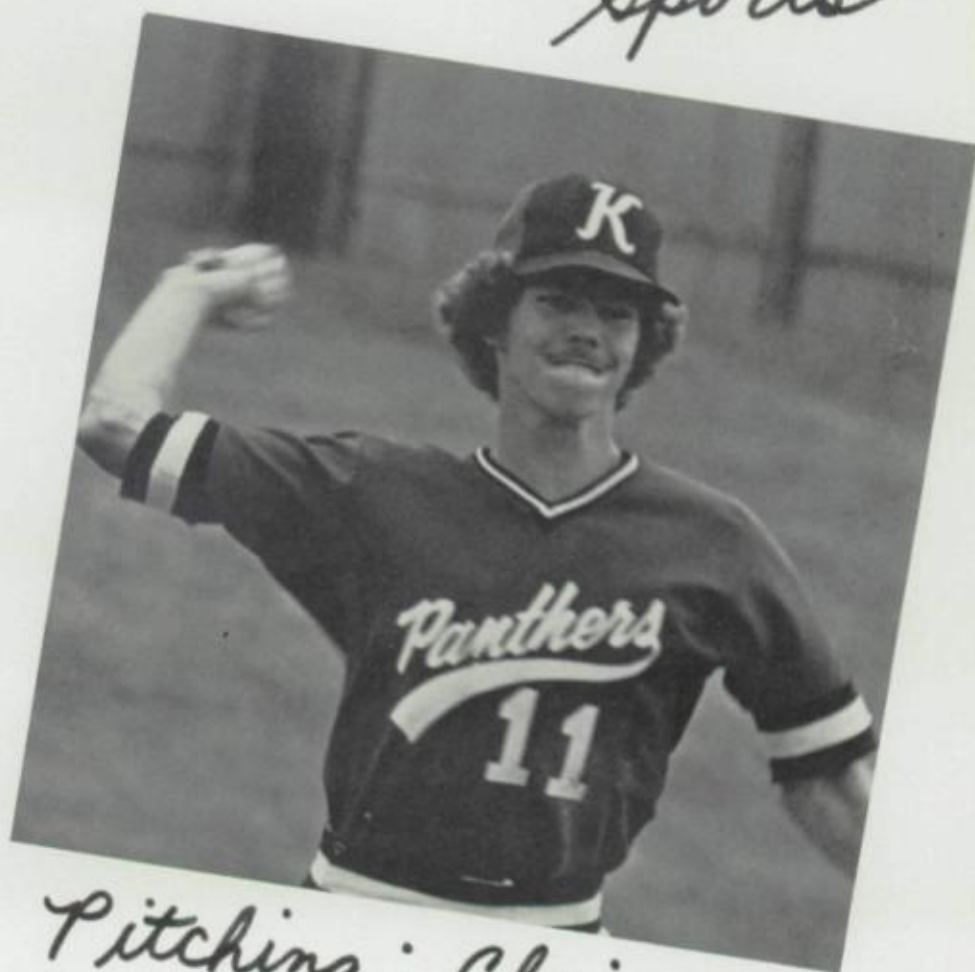

You have also paid the price for success in your athletics. In each performance your determination and grit came shining through. All of the time in practice running laps and lifting weights paid off in the end.

Your sportsmanship has been fantastic whether you were accepting a first-place ribbon or losing the most important game of the season. The pride of a school stems directly from the success of its athletic teams and fan support. You are to be commended for the time and effort you have given back to your school whether you're an athlete or a fan!

Half and Half

Jr. High Basketball split half and half with both girls' and boys' 7th grade having a winning season and 8th grade having a losing season.

The 8th grade girls put forth a great deal of effort but it was of little comfort because they still came away on the short side at the end of the game.

Coach Vicky Rhodes stated, "It was a long hard season which didn't prove to look too impressive, but the girls got the basic skills and some basic knowledge of the sport which the Jr. High level needs so desperately, and as a group we did have fun."

The 7th and 8th grade girls combined for a win over Morton. Seventh grade ended their season at 8 and 1.

The 8th grade boys finished their season at 2 and 11. The first game with Eastern was exciting but the cubs were defeated in overtime.

The 7th grade ended at 11 and 2. Knowing how to pass the ball, good shooting, and height all contributed for their fantastic record.

Winning & Improving

Jr. high wrestling and 7th and 8th grade volleyball were alike in that they all had winning seasons.

The wrestling team, coached by Mike Byrnes, won 3 more meets this year than they did last year. The Panther cubs finished 7th in the Hagerstown tourney.

The jr. high volleyball teams proved to be successful with both teams recording better than .500 seasons. The 7th grade, paced by Ellen Hager and Jennifer Foster, posted a 7 and 2 record. Hard work and determination was the key to their very favorable season.

The 8th grade posted an overall record of 6-5. New to their schedule this year was the addition of the Indiana GAA District Tournament. The team finished 4th in the district.

"The dedication and togetherness of both teams proved to be a large factor in their outstanding performances," stated Withered.

Coach Stan Boler counts the exercises as his cross country team warms up.

Eric Hunt practices the broad jump.

Running, leaping and throwing were what the junior high girls' and boys' track and the cross country team did this year. Although none of the teams did very well a lot of valuable experience was gained.

For the girls' track the running events were the downfall; they did well in the field events. The girls finished their season at 1-3, were 5th in the conference, and placed 2nd in the Henry County meet.

The boys' track finished their season at 0-4 for 1-way meets but finished first in a 3-way meet over Tri High and Parkway. They also came in 5th in the conference but finished 3rd in the Henry County meet.

The cross country team had a rough year, finishing at 0-6. Coach Stan Boler stated, "The cross country team accomplished more than what our record indicates. The team ran well but we lacked the number of runners other schools had, which made a team win impossible even though we had runners in the top ten. The team had fun and are looking forward to next year."

Jr. High Overpower Opponents

Both 7th and 8th grade football teams went undefeated although 7th grade tied with Eastern Hancock. These two teams are the first undefeated football teams in fifteen years. Seventh grader Mike Wade commented, "It was great going undefeated but I wish we had another shot at Eastern."

Coach Mike Julian stated, "The 8th grade football team showed much improvement from last year's team. They avenged their only loss of the year before while scoring over 15 points a game more and shutting out one more team than they had last year. There is little doubt that their ability will go a long way in helping improve on an already successful high school program."

All of the opponents this year found the offensive hard to stop. Eric Hunt was offensive leader. He rushed for almost 900 yards. Bryan Peggs also starred offensively by rushing for over 400 yards and kicking extra points.

The 8th grade defense, even with three shutouts, played less than inspiring at times.

Using more than one offense gave the 7th grade an advantage over their opponents. Coach Barry Welsh commented, "We had a real good group of kids. Undoubtedly they will continue the winning football tradition that has been nurtured in Knightstown's program the last few years."

S-U-C-C-E-S-S

Most ball teams have different playing fields, rules, uniforms and equipment. Although there are great differences between football and volleyball the success of the junior varsity teams can be paralleled.

The J.V. Football team was very balanced offensively, getting over 1000 yards passing and rushing both, while defensively only yielding 100 yards total offensively. Jim Mackey and Jacob Smith led the offense by combining 29 passes for 725 yards and 7 touchdowns. Greg Hochstedler played an extremely important role as a quarterback, completing 51% of his passes and running the offense.

Mike Reeves stated about the defense, "We had a good year and all-around effort, but our defense was the key." Defensively it was an all around effort. Line back-ers Pat Spears, Darin Hopping, and Hochstedler were all top individual tacklers.

Rodney Cox led the team with 3 interceptions. Brian Jones did an excellent job in the kicking game averaging about 30 yards a punt and 40 yards per kick off.

"The two big highlights of the season were shutting out 5 of our 9 opponents and beating Mt. Vernon," was the comment from Coach Gary Ogden.

J.V. Volleyball had a good season ending at 9 and 5, winning 4 of their 6 conference matches.

The key under the basket often is the field of hot battles. Fighting for the ball, Jeff White, assisted by Ron Hammer jumps higher than anybody else.

Concentration is a key element to play basketball. In this attempted free throw from the line, his tongue tells a lot about Marc Armstrong's concentration.

Amazing Reserves

Although the team was young the boys' reserve were tough in their play. With a good season record (14-16), they often opened basketball nights with very exciting games, yet the team did not do very well in the opening season.

Sometimes able to control the games from beginning to end (as they showed Knightstown fans against Winchester), they were also able to come from behind after a slow start and to finally win in the last seconds of the game.

Coach Bill Bergman, declared, "We played as poorly as we could before Christmas. Something happened during Christmas. Then we played the way we should have played earlier."

Player David Smith explained, "With the new year we start to really play defense and it paid!"

It was also an exciting season for the reserve girls' basketball team. The team finished with a five-one record in BBRC action, conceding the only defeat to New Palestine. The highlight of the season was probably the victory over New Castle (27-21), making an overall season record of 8 victories and only 6 losses.

Kelly Phelps was the leading scorer while Julie Coon led the team in field goal percentage. Freshman Kim Beavers was the best rebounder, and Shari Alexander, who had the best free throw percentage, was the number one assist player.

Second year coach Mike Wyatt finally commented, "All in all it was a very rewarding season as the girls worked extremely hard in practice."

Freshman Have Trouble

"This year's freshman basketball team was one of the best teams I've ever coached," was the comment from coach Dan Clevenger.

The freshman played some good teams and were good competition for most of the teams. Although they lost a lot of games, 7 were by only 6 points or less.

Greg Hochstedler, Rob Hall, and Larry Edwards agreed that the defense was the best part of the team's strategy.

“Where’s the . . .?”

“Where’s the tape?!”
 “Where’s the water?”
 “Where’s a towel?”

For anyone who has ever played in a sport or had anything to do with sports, these are familiar lines.

During football season managers, water girls, and athletic trainers fall victim to the cries and yells of the team and coaches. Tape, cleats, footballs, kicking tees, and other such articles are the things in demand. If a manager isn’t around the team usually yells to the water girls for anything they need—mostly the manager that isn’t there. Then comes the time when “break” is yelled and the team comes bombarding over to where the water is found. If not overly thirsty, watergirls, managers, players, and maybe a coach that “accidentally” get in the way gets cooled off by the icy water.

When winter sports roll around managers again take the beating along with the mat mates. Mat mates cheer for the wrestling team, but also wash mats, set up chairs for both teams and all coaches, fix Gatoraid, keep score, keep books, and keep the clock.

Basketball managers do everything from washing the basketballs to wiping up the water that the players spill.

Managers and water girls are required to go to practices and to games; often being there before players and staying until all players are gone and everything is put up.

Needless to say every sport needs its extras to help the season run smoother. Whether to keep mats clean, players taped or keep equipment fixed, clean, and out where it is needed no team would survive without them.

Finding it hard to see, water girl Judy Palmer stands on the bench and yells.

Mark Lawrence keeps the clock and freshman manager Mike Reeves keeps books for basketball.

Mat Mates watch the grapplers intently.

Manager Jay Stearns, cheers the varsity football team to their last victory of the season against Wes-Del.

Not Quite in the Swing of Things

Boys' and girls' golf teams both had a losing season although the girls improved their record over last year. The reserve baseball team split their season.

The boys' golf team finished their season at 4-5 with the Triton Central match rained out. The Panthers finished 4th in the BBRC.

Chuck Helms was low medalist. Low medalist for the girls was Charmie Bonne.

The girls' golf team ended their season with 4-6. In the sectional Knightstown was 7th out of the 10 contesting teams.

Best rebounder and averaging almost 20 points a game, Randy Hall goes for the basket under Mark Lawrence's watch.

Randy Hall was one of Knightstown's key players. His shot was good but not enough to give the Panthers a victory. Greensburg won the game 75-74.

Coaches' attitudes are an entertainment by themselves. Coach Duane Queener tells us the story of the Panthers' game against Greensburg.

Chris Taylor led the team in assists, as evidenced in the action against Eastern Hancock.

Averaging over 20 points per game, Mark Lawrence shoots for two.

Boys Take BBRC Crown

The 1980-81 basketball team promised a lot before the season with six returning lettermen including two of last year's scoring leaders. The Varsity Panthers seemed to have gained the experience needed to win.

But the first games were not as good as expected. After a humiliating defeat against New Castle and a too-late waking against Shenandoah, the hopes for a good season were in bad shape. Even in their first victories the play of the Panthers was not showing the real possibilities they had.

The BBRC games showed a better team even though it still had problems in starting well in the games. Those problems could have cost some victories and were the main reasons for some defeats: five of the seven Knightstown losses were by five points or less.

Senior Randy Hall said, "I think we had a good season by winning the conference, but I felt we were a much better team than we showed." Brian Ratcliff added, "With a few breaks and some heads-up plays, we could have had a better year."

On the way to the BBRC crown, the Panthers were led by senior Randy Hall and junior Mark Lawrence. A player commented, "I think Randy Hall and Mark Lawrence did one fine job. Without them we would have struggled."

Hall, who averaged close to 20 points a game, led the team in rebounds while Lawrence was the county scoring leader at the end of the regular season. Although their personal play was sometimes decisive toward the outcome of the games, the victories were made by a team effort.

At the Winter Sports awards banquet, coach Duane Queener explained, "We came up short of our potential, but everyone contributed to our great season."

BBRC CHAMPS

Knightstown's fans were divided between two sentiments about their girls' basketball season. It was a big turnover when our Panthers lost to Greenfield during the Mount Vernon sectional, since we had beaten them with ease the week before.

But, on the other side one cannot blame a team that had a good season with a record of 12 victories for 4 losses. The BBRC crown testified it.

Jennifer Wilfong looks for help under the eyes of the referee and Knightstown fans.

"We reached the goal I set which was BBRC champions," commented the girls' coach, Ms. Becky Freeman, although she added with some regret, "We should have done better in the sectional tourney..."

This opinion was shared by the players as the best rebounder for Knightstown, Susan Koors, said, "It was an interesting season even though we lost the sectional!" Jennifer Wilfong also agreed, "I don't have too much to say about sectional except that I wish we would have beaten Greenfield, at least!" The top scorer for the Panthers added, "But I was pleased with winning the BBRC title."

Although her shot is blocked, Susan Koors scored 178 points, averaging more than 11 points a game.

Three of the Panthers were selected to the All-Conference Team: sophomore Suzanne Foster, and juniors Susan Koors and Jennifer Wilfong.

Grapplers Endure Tough Season

Although not a lot of people attended wrestling meets regularly, most students saw at least one. The Knightstown-Eastern Hancock match was a 2 p.m. convocation. The match lasted past the 2:55 release bell and many students and teachers remained to watch the grapplers fall to Eastern.

Louie Baker, junior, commented that, overall, "It was a pretty good season. We all got a part into the team." Baker, wrestling in the 185 pound weight class, ended up 15-6 and also winning the team's Most Valuable Wrestler award.

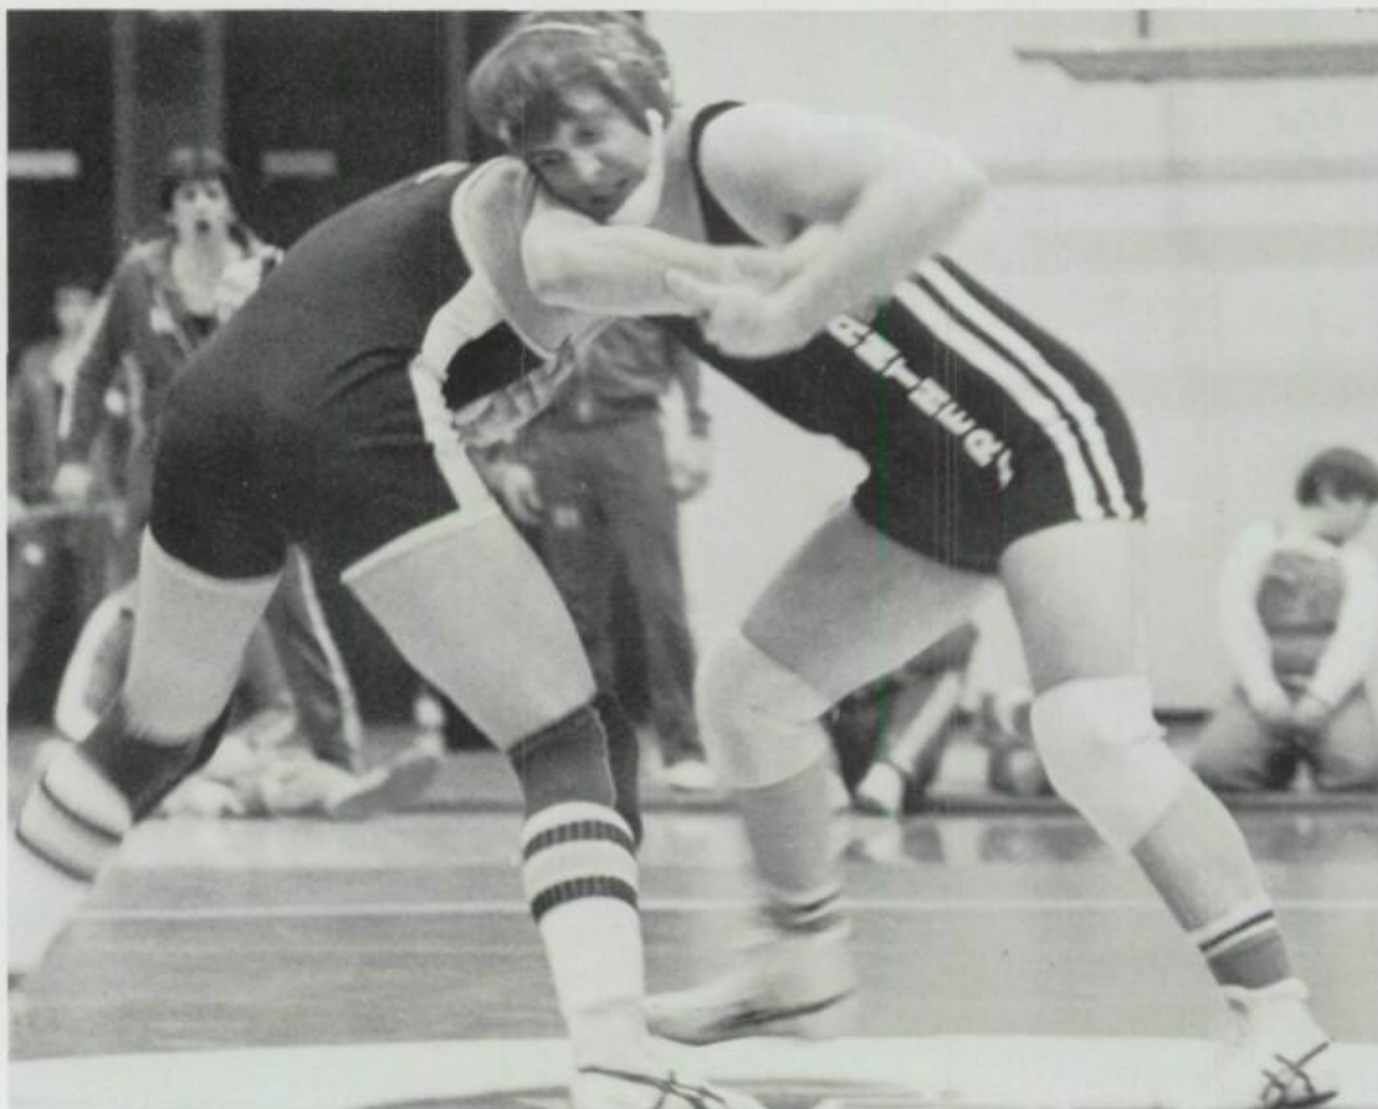

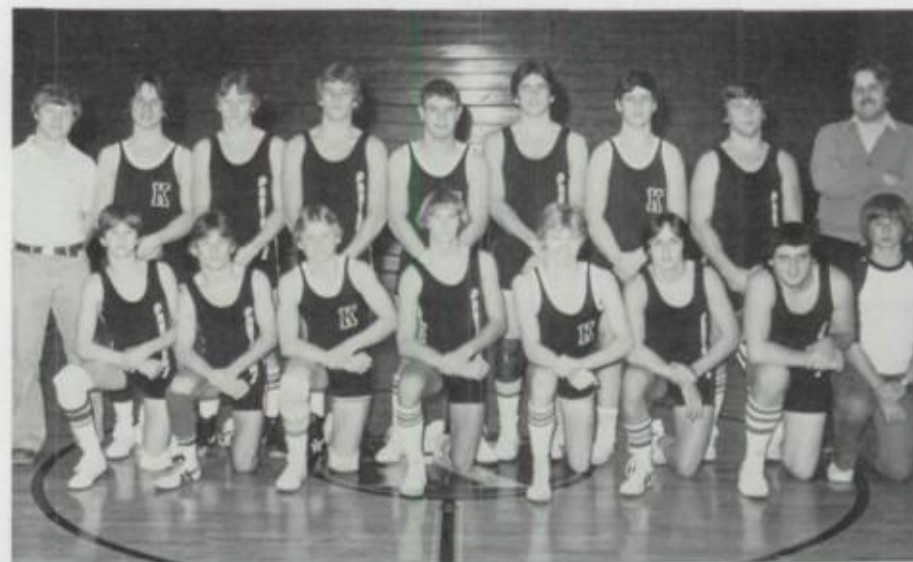

The only seniors, Verl Palmer and Scott Turpin, agreed that while the season was okay the team didn't win a lot.

One of the main reasons was the shortage of manpower. Over half of the team, including Turpin, wrestled their first varsity match this season.

The varsity team never had a full roster.

More Than Expected

Only expected to win four or five matches the varsity volleyball team ended their season at 8-10 and second place in the BBRC. The girls finished strong, winning six of the last eight matches.

The climax of the season was going to Richmond and beating the undefeated team in the final match of the double match.

Senior Cindy Hahn commented, "In the last four years I've grown to appreciate Miss Freeman and her coaching abilities. She has been a great inspiration to me."

Individual award winners were Jennifer Wilfong with most kills and most defensive points, and Cindy Hahn with most offensive points. Wilfong and Hahn were also named for All-Conference.

Most Valuable Player, picked by team members for spirit and over-all abilities was Melinda Gatewood.

Few but Good

Besides the gold medal, most athletes dream of setting new records. Members of the girl's track team did more than dream in the spring of 1981. Sara Lewis' 13.2 second time for the 100 meter dash set a new school record as did Teresa Figg's shotput throw of 33 feet 8 inches.

The 1600 meter relay team consisting of two record-setting veterans, Jennifer Wilfong and Julie Coon, and Cheryl Zech and Diane Zinkan also made their mark in the Knights-town record book with a 4:25.2 time.

In addition to Figg and the relay team, Suzanne Foster and Zinkan qualified in individual events for the sectional.

Coach Kathy Withered's first year with the team ended with a 4-5 season record and a third place in the BBRC.

In sheer numbers alone the boy's track team was stronger than in the past two years, yet their inexperience still led to a 2-7 season record.

Cort Swincher (who advanced to regional competition) in the 100, 200 and 400 meter runs, David McIntosh in the long distance races, and Mark Carroll in the field events saved the day for the boy's track team.

Fighting off injuries and a devastating schedule, the KHS cross country team battled to a 3-4 record in dual meets, and had 1 second and 3 thirds in triangular meets.

Placing three runners in the top ten, the cross country team finished third in the BBRC. David McIntosh (3rd), Marc Armstrong (4th), and Bruce Shelton (10th) paced the team, with McIntosh and Armstrong earning all-conference status.

Running very well at season's end, the Panther harriers romped to a second place finish in the Henry County meet and 8th in the very tough Pendleton Heights sectional where McIntosh led the team, finishing 17th in a field of 97.

Work, Team Work

In the middle of June, at the ball park and up-town, all the guys start counting down the days—not until school starts but until circuit training begins, the time of the year when guys start to practice three times a day for football. As if this isn't enough, the first practice is at eight a.m. With the exception of an occasional over-sleeper, coaches, players, water-girls, and managers are on the field bright and early. The sleepyhead gets a few extra minutes sleep but makes up for it by running his mile.

After the first victory most of the players agree the rigorous training is all worthwhile.

"We had a very good season," commented coach Don Willard on his team's 7-3 record. "I don't think anyone expected us to win as many as we did. The players all put forth a lot of effort."

At the end of the season they were co-champs with Triton Central and Eastern Hancock in the BBRC, the sixth time Knightstown had either won or shared the BBRC.

Individual performances and games highlighted the season. Brian Grandison intercepted the ball in the last minutes of the game against New Palestine, giving Mark Lawrence a chance to throw. Lawrence's pass was on the money to Grandison and Knightstown won the game 18-12. Grandison, a senior, ended his year with 7 interceptions and his career record with 12. Grandison also led Panther defense with 192 points.

Although his ankle gave him some trouble, senior Jeff Stearns had a successful season ending with 1171 yards running.

Stearns broke the school's single game rushing record with 277 yards against Centerville.

Other outstanding players were juniors Mark Lawrence, passing for over 100 yards, and Marc Bundy with 35 receptions.

Referring to group effort, asst. coach Mike Byrnes stated, "The offensive line did a super job in protecting Lawrence and opening the holes for the backs."

Lawrence, Grant Wilfong and Grandison were named to the All Conference team.

Tennis Under Lights, Anyone?

Night tennis became routine for the girls' team who played several of their fourteen matches long past dark. The heart-breaking part of it was the team lost every late-playing match, including the one against Lincoln which lasted until 10 p.m.

Despite the losses, the girls' tennis team finished with a 6-8 season record and a 4-1 conference standing, showing great improvement over last year. Seniors Melinda and Sherri Gatewood, new to the team, developed as the top singles players, while Cindy Hahn and Sherry Phelps, the #1 and 2 singles players in 1980 emerged as the leading doubles team.

In addition to Belinda Cross's morale-building coaching, extra coaching assistance came from Mrs. Linda Gatewood who gave the girls pointers which she had learned through lessons with a pro player in California.

Only one player, Melinda Gatewood, advanced to the Connersville sectional, held the same day as graduation. Gatewood, named valedictorian of her class, opted to attend the sectional where she was defeated in her second match of the day.

The boys' tennis team record saw a 100 percent improvement over the 1979 season. They still fielded a depressing record of 2 wins and 12 losses due to injuries and lack of pre-season practice time.

Despite the losses, the group maintained a good team spirit thanks to the constant challenging for positions among themselves and to a strong camaraderie.

Most Valuable Player Brian Ratcliff, co-captain with Roger Kilmer, was the first KHS boys' tennis player in several years to be named to the all-conference team.

Ball Teams Are Hits

Both softball and baseball had good seasons. The softball team is the first winning team since 1977, ending the season at 6-3. The highlight of the lady Panthers' season was beating New Castle 23-12.

Sue Koors had the highest batting average with .635 and was awarded Most Valuable Player. Anna Wyatt captured the most spirited player award.

By playing good defense, stealing nearly 100 bases, and hitting .284 as a team the varsity baseball team put together their fourth straight winning season with 14-11-1 and tied with Eastern Hancock for second place in the BBRC. Panthers have finished 1st or 2nd each of the last six seasons.

Beating Shenandoah in 8 innings, 5-4, and then Tri High, 5-1, the Panthers captured the sectional crown for the second time in three years. The team went on to lose a heart-breaker to Muncie Central in the regional. Trailing 7-4 in the bottom of the 7th inning the Panthers tied the score 7-7 before losing in the 8th inning, 7-8.

Brian Grandison, leading hitter, was awarded the Lyle O. Bell award, Most Valuable Player, batting .357.

The Charley Hustle award was given to Rem Perry. Earned-Run Average went to Bill Garris. Garris pitched a no-hitter against Indianapolis Attucks.

Baron Magee, Grandison, Chris Taylor, and Mark Lawrence were All-Conference.

At the season's end coach Mike Wyatt commented, "Losing two fine seniors in Brian Grandison and Scott Wells, the Panthers still will be in good shape as they have 12 returning lettermen. Pitching still remains a question mark. Pitching will be the key to the Panthers' success next season. If the pitching staff comes around and the attitudes are good, next year should be the best year of baseball at KHS since 1967 when the Panthers made their only trip to the semi-state."

You have determined the success or failure of certain clubs or organizations by your interest or lack of interest. This has caused a weeding out of unsuccessful clubs and has left the more stable clubs to grow.

You have chosen your favorite clubs by the things that interest you. You have used each club to help you grow as a person in some way. In turn you have given our student body a special and distinct personality; just like yours, its special and unique!

Large Memberships Help Clubs

A good year for a high school club is usually signified by increased membership and successful money-making projects. This year proved to be a very good year for most of the clubs.

The French club probably had the best year of all. Membership was higher than ever before. They also sold stationery and candy canes during the year and both turned out to be successful campaigns.

The largest club in the school, the Spanish Club, also had a year of activities and money successes. On March 5 the Spanish Club along with the Foster Parents Club had a roller skating party at Gibson's Arena at New Castle. During the Easter season they sold chocolate Easter bunnies. In May they went to Chi Chi's Restaurant in Indianapolis for an evening of Mexican food and culture.

A first for the National Honor Society was a "Spring Fling" dance and party held in March. The Honor Society sold candy for their money-making project. The most important activity of the Honor Society was the inductions. Three new members were inducted November 30 while 29 juniors were made members in the April induction.

Following the November 30 induction of members, Michele Spears and Kathy Richardson enjoy the refreshments.

Activities and Exploits Mark Year

Star Farmer Robert Stoten was recognized at the State FFA convention in June, finishing a busy year for the Future Farmers of America.

The citrus fruit sale in November/December moved 325 cartons of grapefruit, oranges and tangelos and grossed $3000 for the club. Contests throughout the year found the FFA placing third in county dairy judging, third in district parliamentary procedure, and member Diana Thompson with a fourth place finish in the Henry County Livestock Judging on March 27.

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes was active in a different manner, holding many breakfasts at Thompson's Restaurant with guest speakers. Christmas time saw the members collecting canned goods for needy area families.

A re-vitalized Industrial Education Club under the guidance of Mr. Akers conducted a successful pizza and submarine sandwich sale in the fall, then continued with a year of Tuesday night meetings, projects and field trips.

Fun-Filled Evenings

A Senior-Faculty banquet was presented by the student council. The purpose of the banquet was to recognize teachers and various students. Several awards were given. The Dizzy Blonde award was presented to Miss Carol Hall, Deadra O'Neil received the Punk Rock, Mr. Frank Hayes was awarded the Mad Hatter, Paul Wallace was given a book on how to form plurals and Mrs. Schram was given the largest of all, a $1 million fake check from the senior class for all that she had done throughout the year.

This event ended a fun-filled year for all who participated. Numerous other events that the student council planned included Rally Days, and the presentation of a $50 savings bond to John Steurer, winner of a Christmas contest.

Attending an Indiana Pacer-Los Angeles Laker basketball game on Feb. 4 was new for the KHS Varsity Lettermen's Club. This newly-reinstated club drew a very large membership.

Being a teacher's aide is sometimes a demanding job. They are often asked to type, mimeograph, grade papers, and enter scores into grade books. There are no credits given for that activity but you can receive a lot of respect for the profession. Library aide, guidance and main office aide was a sought-after position.

Teacher's aide Laura Wolski looks up vital information, as Mrs. Jean Ann Henry goes about her daily routine.

Musical Groups Keep the Beat

"Would you all rise and join the Knightstown High School Band as they play our national Anthem." These were the words of Mr. Larry Barnes at every home ball game as the pom and flag corps presented the national colors.

Even though the band department has suffered instability by having three different directors over a four year period, the band still managed to have a successful season of entertaining at football and basketball games.

Band members as well as the majorettes spent hours selling various items to raise money for new sheet music, new flags and a summer trip.

Another busy musical group is the K.H.S. swing choir. Tuesday evening rehearsals allowed the choir to prepare for their numerous extra-curricular appearances.

Most of the choirs performances were for organizations such as the Psi Ota Xi, Tri Kappa and The Classroom Teachers Association. The main event for the choir was a trip to New Castle to appear on a March of Dimes telethon on channel 49 Sunday, January 24.

Hard Work Brings Rewards

The advancement of two students to the State Speech Finals culminated a busy year for the Speech and Drama Club. Sherri Gatewood and Eddie Eickhoff took their dramatic duo cutting from The Creation of the World and Other Business to the third round of the state finals on March 28 at Perry Meridian High School.

Besides attending speech meets, often leaving school at 6:30 a.m. on wintry Saturdays, the Speech and Drama Club successfully staged the classic Arsenic and Old Lace. A long-needed dimmer board was purchased just in time for the November 7 and 8 performances.

The Art Club held several successful events also. The annual Movie Night on October 29 drew 300 persons to the Student Center to view the scary Devil's Rain. The club also spent a busy fall day touring the Cincinnati Museum of Art. A ski trip to Paoli in January helped ease the strain after exams.

Highlights of the Senior High Home Ec Club's year were a Halloween party for members and hosting the annual Christmas Tea for school corporation employees.

Members Busy the Entire School Year

Helping out elementary teachers was the main event for the Future Teachers' Club members. The senior-centered group was a great experience for all interested persons.

Foster Parent Club members were involved in charity type functions. A visit to Holly Hills Nursing Home was the main happening for members. Stockings filled with candy were passed out and carols were sung. A banquet for Christmas was another of the activities in which members participated.

Christmas paper sales started a busy school year for Business Leaders of Tomorrow. Other activities included field trips to either Eli Lilly or Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

Holidays were far from left out with a little tykes' Christmas party, Valentine candy and flower sales and a March 17 skating party.

Spirit week activities and their awards banquet completed a memorable year.

Hard Work Began Before Season Started

Contrary to popular belief high school cheerleaders do not begin their season at the first football game.

Camps, clinics and workshops take up most of squad members and sponsors summer. Rewards for both squads was symbolized by bringing home four superior ribbons and a spirit stick. Thus being the first squad to do so in fifteen years. First year sponsor Sherri Mattix said, "The girls were good workers, and she had never been in contact with a group of girls who got along as well as the varsity and reserve cheerleaders during summer workshops.

Trying to boost school spirit, cheerleaders established a pep club. Charles A. Beard school corporation students of all ages sat in the cheerblock trying to promote enough spirit to bring the Panthers to another victory.

Freshmen students had tryouts for cheerleaders to support the freshmen basketball teams in the fall. They again tried out in the spring for a spot on the varsity or reserve cheerleading squads.

Supporting a team that drew a small crowd mainly consisting of family members and close friends was taken care of by fourteen hard working Mat Mates.

Just cheering for wrestlers was not the only task of Mat Mates. Extra tasks included washing down the mat before matches, keeping the official records, running the electronic scoreboard and making sure wrestlers did not over-heat, by providing them with beverages after their matches.

An Organization For Every Interest

A new group, the Tennis Club, was started by Mrs. Cross and Mr. Kohler. Aimed at getting both junior and senior high students interested in tennis, their activities centered on learning and perfecting tennis techniques.

The Band Boosters' ice cream social in August gave the junior high band and its 'new' director, Mr. Edwards, their first official performance. The senior high band marched in a number of parades in the summer and early fall, most notably in the Carthage Fall Festival parade. Both groups sold flower bulbs and cheese and sausage to help buy music and new summer band uniforms, and to finance a trip to St. Louis in the summer of '81.

History buffs joined the junior high History Club with Miss Berkebile as sponsor. The choirs joined the bands for a Christmas concert, but they had their own program in the spring.

The fall talent show was again staged by the choirs to raise money for the spring musical. Chris Sitler received the first place award.

Cheering and Clubs Develop Interests

With early try-outs the seventh and eighth grades elected cheerleaders in plenty of time for them to cheer at the junior high football games. In past years the cheerleaders were selected in time for basketball season, but this year they were able to lead yells at the football games as well.

More than an introduction to home economics, the junior high Home Economics Club drew members who were interested in the field and who also knew something about home economics. With club sponser Mrs. Lois Shields, they planned activities including a cookie making party before the Christmas holidays.

The Lettermen's Club held meetings during homeroom period but didn't do a lot, according to club sponser, Mr. Gary Ogden.

It is up to the cheerleaders to keep the chants going and the spirits up at basketball games.

We've looked at you as the student, the athlete, and the club member. Now let's look at the real down-to-earth you - you the person.

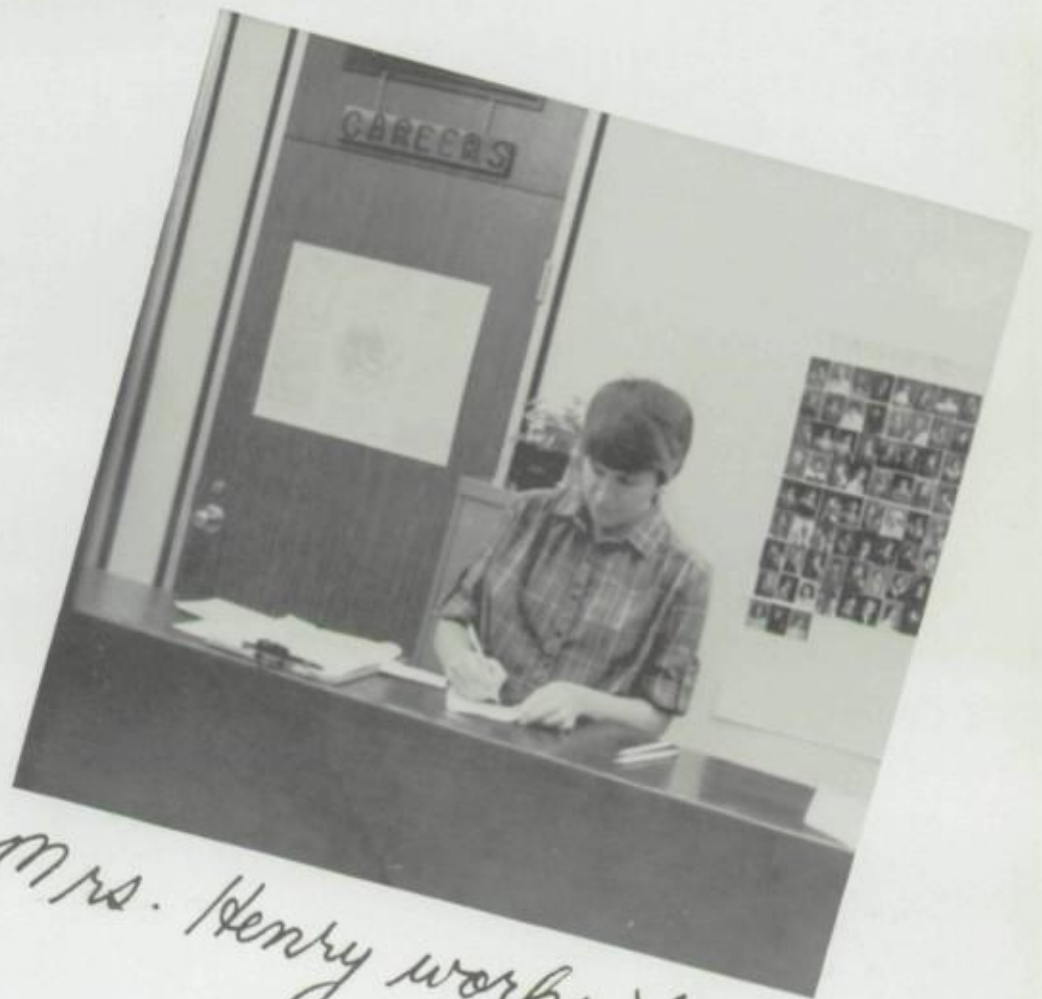

You are the only person in the entire world like you! Nobody else talks, looks or thinks exactly the same way you do! Whether or not you realize it you have made your own special "mark" on KHS. In some way, no matter how small it may seem, you've added something to your surroundings.

You have all known people who you thought were perfect. You thought about how you'd like to be just like them. At times they seemed to be super-human. Then came the realization that they are no better than you! That's when you discover - we're all just people!

Seniors Show Their Shirts

Reaching the pinnacle of secondary education has its rewards. One of the rewards is the right to wear a shirt with the word 'SENIOR' written across the chest.

These garments of the torso come with a variety of sayings: 'Senior seniority . . . It's great to be at the top'; 'Senior women'; and the usual—'Class of '81'. The shirts could be seen as early as May 15, 1980 on the bodies of the more impatient seniors.

Not all seniors, however, run to the shack at Washington Square to fork out the money for a t-shirt.

There are a variety of reasons for this lack of enthusiasm. "I couldn't afford it", was Rick Nation's alibi. This is quite understandable with the amount of other items that need be purchased during the senior year: i.e. pictures, keys, graduation, announcements, etc.

There are still those seniors who believe that the shirts are an important part of the final year. As Terri Gosser put it, "I'm finally a senior. I mean I've waited thirteen years for this." To these people the senior year is the last hurrah and nothing is too extravagant.

Putting the finishing touches on her book critique, Michele Wyatt prepares to hand in her government assignment.

Hot Talk In the Hallway

For the underclassmen, walking the halls before school was status quo. Juniors had a tendency to congregate around the lockers. But for seniors the place to be before school was the 'senior hall'.

At approximately 7:55 A.M., just as the physics class was being set free, seniors began filling up space between the north cafeteria door and where the west hall meets the middle hallway.

Here the latest gossip as well as an occasional bag of doughnuts was shared. Whether it was the latest in movies or a gripe against a teacher, on any given morning the conversation was tasty. The news was hottest, though, on Mondays. After three nights and two days of dates, parties, and weekend trips everyone had a piece of gossip or a new joke to tell.

Every morning before school seniors line the hallway. Dave Garmene and Michele Spears find their spots next to the lockers.

A sort of mild rowdiness would develop every morning. Besides talking, activities included rib-tickling, nudging, and bootleg coke drinking. The rumble of the hall was always a sure sign that something was happening in the 'senior hall'.

Jerry Lewis, Where Are You When We Need You?

There is no telethon for it. There is no nationwide fundraiser to wipe out its existence. It doesn't take lives, but it does affect the report card. It is a disease. It is senioritis!

What is senioritis? Who does it strike? What are its effects?

According to government teacher, Mike Byrnes, "Senioritis is a disease that envelopes seniors sometime after spring break." One of the main signs is apathy. "The symptoms become more obvious toward graduation," added Byrnes.

Eventhough it is more noticeable after spring break, students have been known to feel the symptoms before winter break. Cindy Hahn claims, "I had it last summer." Senior Marcia Nation also has had some of the symptoms show up early. "You think, 'Oh, wow! I'll be out in May' ... and you do your homework. You say to yourself, 'I made it this far. They won't stop me now!'"

What can be done to prevent this disease? Guidance Counselor Peg Queener suggests the student remain goal-oriented right up to the end of the school year.

Looking in through the window at the senior math class the senior mathematicians can be seen discussing a problem.

Preparations for Prom, Poll People

Prom is an evening of fun and enchantment, of double dating and dressing up. But a lot of preparation goes into that one evening, a lot of hard work and a lot of meetings!

Prom committees are the backbone of a successful evening. Making sure that everything is ready for that one night is a big responsibility. Organized committees are the best way to meet this challenge.

The five committees (entertainment, favors and invitations, food, decorations, and theme) have their own separate tasks. But when these tasks are taken together, a wonderful evening is in store.

What would prom be without music? Supplying music and other diversions is the job of the entertainment committee. There are a good deal of hassles, including bookings and contracts, that this committee must go through to keep the people dancing.

What is the best way to remember something? Memorabilia! And that is basically what the favors and invitations committee is all about. Tokens to remember the evening by are just as much a part of prom as tuxedos. Traditionally, the juniors do prom for the sake of the seniors. It is also this committee's job to send out invitations to the senior class.

How can you have a prom without food? The duty of the food committee is, for the most, part, self explanatory. Whether the menu calls for chicken or ham, the food committee has it under control.

What will the place look like? That is determined by the decorations committee. Ordering the needed material and putting it to good use is a big task for any class, but with a productive decorations committee, the task can be made easier.

What will be the mood? Working hand in hand with the decorations committee is the theme committee. Setting the right mood for a prom is important. A good balance between fun and romance needs to be maintained so everyone can enjoy the wonderful evening that is commonly referred to as prom.

On Your Mark(c?)!

"Mark has history sixth period".

"Marc Armstrong?"

"No."

"Fort?"

"No."

"Well, which Mark are you talking about?"

This conversation could very easily take place when talking about the class of 1982, a class with six, count 'em, six Marks. Well, in all actuality there are four Marks and two Marcs, but that only con-fuses matters further.

Figuring out which Mark (or Marc) is which can get hectic when somebody relates an incident involving one of the six.

However, in the interest of sorting things out, some of them have acquired nicknames, such as 'Arnold', 'Jed', and 'Buns'.

In any event, when asking for a person named Mark (or Marc) it pays to be specific.

"Mark Carrol?"

"No!"

We're Juniors . . . Already?!!

Many people don't realize how quickly high school days fly by until they become Juniors. The Junior year brings with it the awesome and exciting thought of "just one more year to go!"

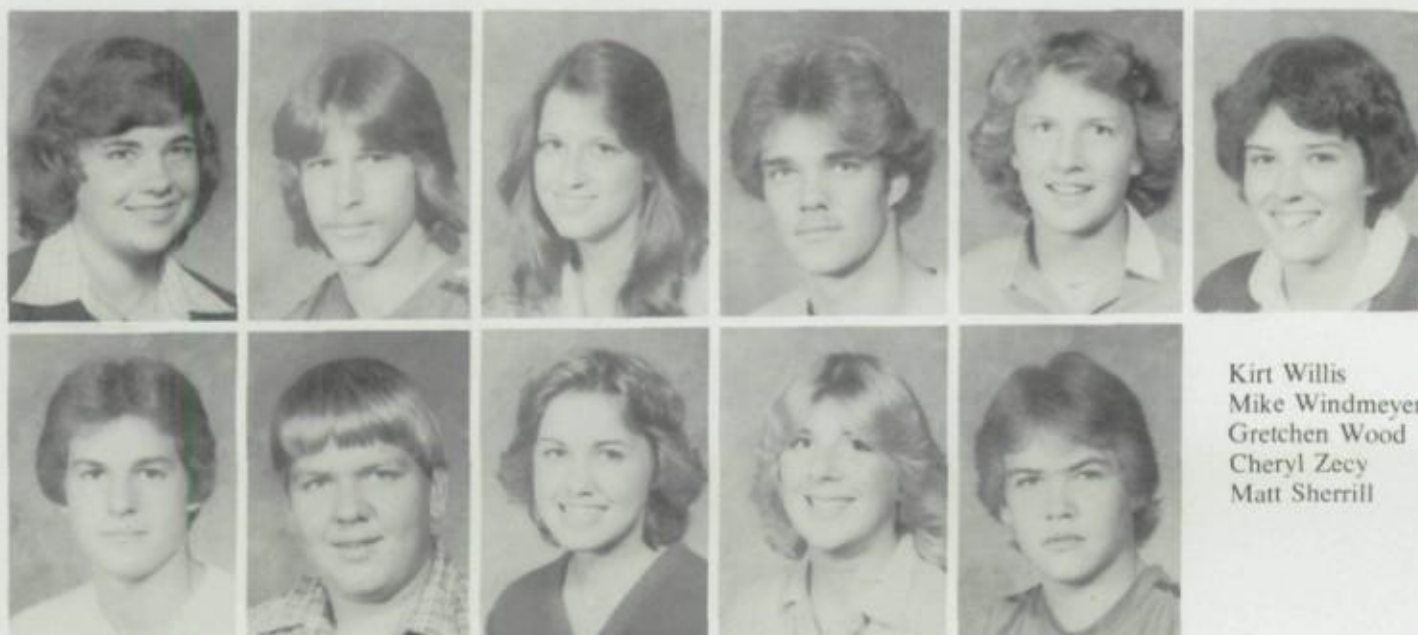

Along with this thought the Junior year brings a host of other thoughts as well as tasks. Of course there are the Junior class traditions such as taking over the concession stand, selling magazine subscriptions, planning and putting on prom, getting to write a term paper, and taking PSAT'S. The Junior year also opens the door to many other activities such as Jr.-Sr. dance, prom, college fair day and vocational school.

The major thought the Junior class brings with it is the thought of deciding on goals for the future. Most people start thinking about college, jobs and for some marriage.

Although the Junior year brings with it fun and games it also carries with it a serious conotation.

It's the fact of finally taking on real responsibility and taking steps toward the future.

The Early Bird Gets the Money.

Raising money for the prom begins as early as the sophomore year. Two years of fund raising are required to earn enough money to pay for food and decorations.

The major way of earning money for the sophomores is the traditional sophomore smorgasbord. Since the affair has annually been successful it has become the biggest project of the sophomore class.

The main reason for success has been the help and dedication of the sophomores and their parents. Parents form committees to separate the jobs that have to be done.

This show of hard work has always paid off in previous years. Year after year people line up outside of the student center waiting to partake and enjoy a home made meal.

sophomore, n. student in second year of high school

Sophomores slowly work their way through their tenth grade year. The sophomore year is a time for thinking about more freedoms, the all-important license, and just being young. As guidance counselor Mrs. Peg Queener stated, "A sophomore is someone who is unfolding; opening up to the world around them."

The tenth grade year is a time for young people to start looking at long-time goals including college, a career, or even the military. A few sophomores plan to spend their junior year in area vocational schools, learning whatever skills their hearts desire.

When asked about the sophomore year Mary York replied, "It stinks!" and Sara Lewis added, "It's real boring." However, Kristie Stewart had a completely different opinion: "It's been pretty fun . . . our class is finally getting it together."

Take Your Pick

The sophomore year finally gives students the option to really build their majors. The previous year is filled with required courses but the sophomore year allows the student to choose electives.

Tenth graders can go in many different directions. Some choose to become 'mad scientists' by taking biology or chemistry. Others may choose to become happy homemakers by taking cooking and sewing classes. Still others have the opportunity to enter the world of business by taking typing, marketing or any of the other business-related courses.

There are only two required courses in the students' tenth year. One of these is only for a semester: health, while the other class is the omnipresent English. This leaves five and a half class periods open for electives.

High Fees Present Problems For Drivers' Ed Program

Inflation and a state legislature reluctant to increase school funding caused the fees for drivers' ed. to skyrocket for 1981.

The summer Drivers' Education program cost $60.00 per student which primarily hit the freshmen and a few sophomores.

Most people agreed that the price was too high and some even refused to take the class because of this. One person suggested that if the school board would buy the cars, the price couldn't possibly be so high, but according to Mr. Queener, drivers' ed coordinator, the cars are only used in summer and it would cost too much to maintain them.

To one student's question about Driver's Ed all year Mr. Queener said: "The school board has explored the possibility of having Driver's Ed all year but haven't reached a decision."

Other students complained about having to take the class the second session, June 28 to July 24, when they really needed to take it first. As one student said, "They should get more teachers to teach it, so people can take it when they want to."

"The State appropriations used to pay the teachers' salaries but now it comes out of the corporation, so we can't afford more teachers," replied Queener.

Most complaints, however, were about the early hour at which Drivers Ed. started: 8:30 to 10 am for classroom, and later times for driving. Some girls said they wished it would start earlier because they couldn't do much in the afternoon because of Drivers Ed.

Even with the $60.00 per student cost, Queener said it still wouldn't foot the bills for Drivers' Ed. The rest of the money, needed to pay salaries, car rental, gas, and insurance came from the corporation's general funds.

Despite the complaints about Drivers Education program, most students agreed with Darren Greene: "It's better than waiting six months!"

Slow Year for Class Activities

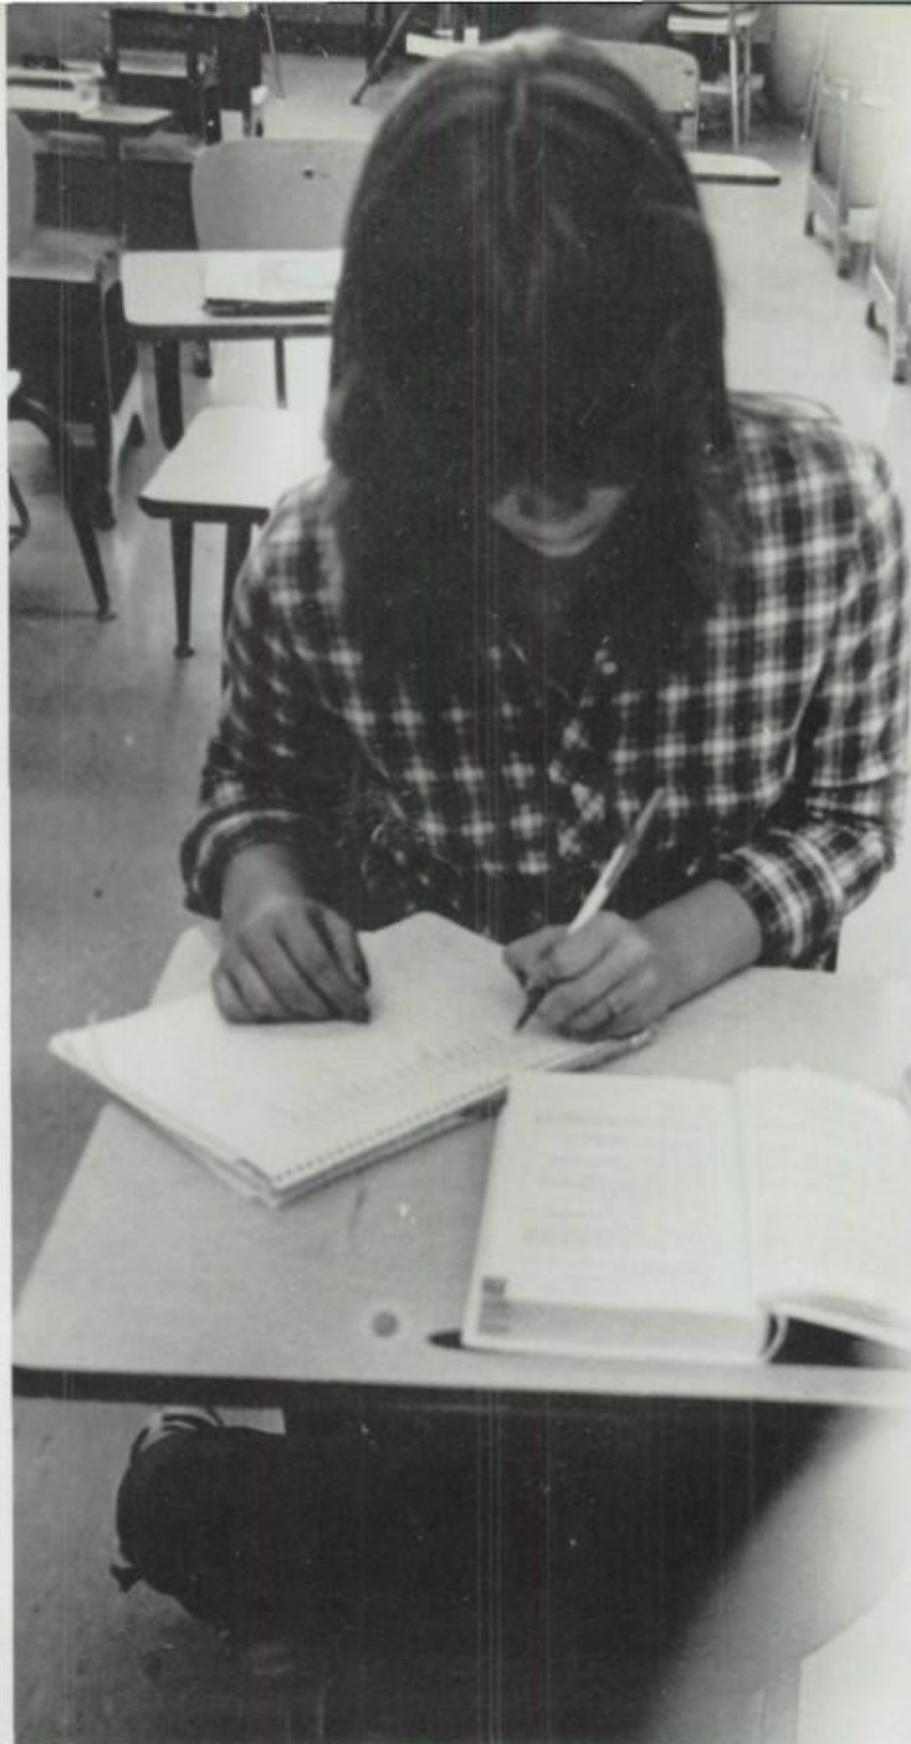

It was not the best of years for the freshman class.

In January the class sold candy, Supercrunch bars for $1 each, but instead of making the anticipated $1000 profit, they only made approximately $250.

Around 150 people attended the class dance on March 6, paying $1.50 per couple or $1 per person. They sat or stood around the student center and no one danced, however, so the band was asked to stop playing about halfway through the three hour event.

Freshmen Cope With New Status

For most freshmen the realization of officially being in high school finally hit the first week of school. The fact that they were no longer in junior high was a welcomed one indeed.

Along with the aura of finally being a high school teen came the classes and homework assignments that were the biggest part of high school life.

Freshmen learned early in the year that high school was not as glamorous as it seemed.

After the initial orientation into the high school routine even the 24 students new from Carthage easily adjusted to KHS life.

They became active in sports as well as social activities. The only one-class team was the freshman basketball team. This proves that although the freshmen are a part of the high school student body, they obviously stand apart from the rest.

Spelling Champs in Eighth Grade

Room 6 was the scene for the 1981 junior high spelling bee. Over 20 seventh and eighth graders lined the walls for the competition.

Expected to last about 20 minutes, the contest went a surprising 40. Eddie Manning finally stood alone, surviving to represent Knightstown Junior High School in the Henry County spelling bee. Classmate Wayne Zech was the runner-up and therefore the alternate.

Not everything they did was academic, though. With the help of Mrs. Queener, sponsor, the officers lined up some social activities for the class.

7th Grade Settles In

Coming from two different elementary schools: Kennard and Knightstown, members of the seventh grade easily mixed to form new friendships among their classmates.

By mid-September they had elected officers: Fred York, president; Marc Hiner, vice president; Liz Smith, secretary; and JoAnne Hamblin, treasurer. These four helped make class decisions and planned parties for their classmates to enjoy.

Miss Berkebile's seventh grade Social Studies class held a mock trial. Fred York and Mike Wade take their roles seriously.

The First Days Are the Worst

Going into the seventh grade was quite a change for some students. After being the oldest ones in elementary school, they entered junior high and ended up the youngest.

The first day of school seventh graders had trouble finding the rooms they were supposed to be in. The orientation program before school began may have helped, but with several hundred more people around it got confusing to find the right classrooms.

Some short seventh graders were almost stepped on, others were teased by older students.

The problems didn't last long, though, and the seventh graders learned a lot about making friends and being independent.

From Bach To Stamps, Teachers' Hobbies Span Spectrum

Contrary to popular belief, teachers do not spend all their time preparing tests, grading homework, and thinking up new ways to torture students. Most faculty members have hobbies and special interests, just like normal people.

For instance, Mr. Riehle is a stamp collector. He has been a serious philatelist now for four years, collecting United States commemorative stamps. Another stamp collector, Mr. Kohler, also spends time woodworking—for fun, not profit.

Often a hobby reflects the department in which a teacher works. Mrs. Collins, an English teacher, likes to read in her spare time. In the science department there is Mr. Hayworth, a mushroom hunter who is also interested in fishing. Fellow science teacher Mr. Bishop traps for fox and muskrat. Not only does he find this hobby enjoyable, but enterprising as well. Mr. Dukeman, an art teacher, is a well-respected potter. He takes his works to various art festivals in the area and manages to earn a little money in the process.

Golf is a favorite of Mr. Gardner. An enthusiastic club-swinging, he spends five to six times a week at Raintree Springs Golf Course during the summer months. His biggest thrill was in 1964 when he got a hole-in-one. Another golfer, Mr. Tatum also loves to go to the movies. He boasts having seen all but one of the 1981 Oscar nominees.

Miss Berkebile is big on needle-point. Active with the avocation since fourth grade, she even does her own designs.

One of the school's most serious musicians is not in the music department but rather the math department. Mrs. Wiatt has been playing piano since the age of four and violin since she was twelve. As she says, "I learned how to read music before I learned how to read words."

Currently she plays violin with the Atheneum Orchestra and the viola with the Butler Symphony. Although she finds playing with string quartets more personal and enjoyable, her greatest moment in performing was playing four-hand Bach on piano with a professional.

To Build or Not: That Is the Question

A controversial building program calling for new elementary schools at Knightstown and Carthage as well as middle school located east of the current high school marked the year for the Charles A. Beard School Corporation's Board of Trustees. The multi-million dollar project brought public reaction when the possibility of razing the old "Academy Building" at Knightstown and the Bundy Building at Carthage was announced.

Architects Wright, Porteous, and Lowe of Indianapolis, hired by the board to develop plans, submitted designs at the June 1, 1981 board meeting. Building costs were estimated in the neighborhood of six million dollars.

The building project did not go without controversy. The proposed razing of the Knightstown Academy, currently the upper elementary, brought cries of opposition from the public. Concerned citizens attended a June 1980 board meeting to voice various opinions favoring preservation of the building.

Some reasons for saving the structure were sentimental. Some felt the school was historical. Some had attended high school there themselves. Still others felt the building, with its globe and telescope towers, had class. Concerning the entire program, citizens claimed a declining student population did not warrant new buildings.

Due to the deteriorating conditions of the old buildings and concern over possible negative influences in mixing junior and senior high students, however, the Board of Trustees decided to pursue the matter of a new building project.

Through our letter we have focused on you and the different roles you play at school. One role you play is that of consumer.

If you probably haven't thought of yourself as a consumer too many times. But if there weren't consumers, there would be no advertisement section; therefore there would be no book. Who would sell ads to a book where a consumer would never see his ad?

Thanks to you we have ads for all types of businesses from photographic services to grain elevators. And thanks to you, we have a yearbook!

1st NATIONAL BANK

KNIGHTSTOWN

FIRST NATIONAL BANK . . . it all started back in 1865: providing, serving, simply taking care of all banking needs. In the twentieth century they are still striving to assist you in every way possible. And being the concerned people they are, they just continually seek new opportunities to serve.

There are drive-up services located at St. Rd. 109 and Morgan Street in Knightstown, besides their establishment on Main Street—just for you!

Laura Wolski fills out a deposit slip at the 1st NATIONAL BANK.

WESTERN AUTO

KNIGHTSTOWN

WESTERN AUTO . . . the answer to your long search for value, quality, and reasonable prices—all at the same time. With a range of merchandise from Western Flyer bikes and Wizard Lawnmowers to batteries and household items, WESTERN AUTO has the stock to meet a variety of needs.

GOODWIN DODGE

KNIGHTSTOWN

It seems extremely hard to find a decent deal on a car while in high school, preparing for college, or beginning a family. Yet, having a car is a necessity, and GOODWIN DODGE is doing all they can to help. Located at Main and Madison, they offer top quality vehicles and inflation-fighting prices.

Lindsay Love and Michelle Gosser look over a new car at GOODWIN DODGE.

CITIZENS NATIONAL BANK KNIGHTSTOWN

Each depositor insured to $40,000

We live in a world of modern conveniences, and CITIZEN'S NATIONAL BANK is doing all they can to make banking as simple and fast as possible. They're doing a good job, too. Checking accounts, savings accounts, and loans can be processed quickly and simply. Why live in a hassle over money matters? Banking is convenient at CITIZEN'S NATIONAL BANK.

KNIGHTSTOWN ELEVATOR

KNIGHTSTOWN

Wanting to stock up on puppy and cat chow for their pets, Donna Hunt and Cindy Hahn know they can find whatever they need at KNIGHTSTOWN ELEVATOR.

JARVIS TEXACO KNIGHTSTOWN

JARVIS TEXACO is located on Main Street in Knightstown. Besides gas they also offer such services as tune ups, automotive repairs and car inspections.

Towing is just one of the many services offered by JARVIS & SON TEXACO. Mr. Jarvis and son, Scott, just returned from rescuing a stranded driver.

HALL MOTORS CHEVROLET KNIGHTSTOWN

If you've been looking to buy a new or used car, one that will give you better gas mileage, HALL MOTORS CHEVROLET has a wide selection of small cars as well as many other styles. If you have any questions, just ask one of the salespersons; they'd be glad to help. HALL MOTORS is located on U.S. 40 west of Knightstown.

STATON-HALL CHEVROLET has several different cars to choose from. KHS students look for that special car they hope to buy.

P.S. As you know many things go on at 1 Panther Trail. The volumes of mail don't tell the entire story, nor do the games, dances or other public affairs. Classes are only a part of school life as are the clubs that many students join.

We have attempted to communicate what goes on at KHS, but it is impossible to capture all the individual memories which have grown out of life at 1 Panther Trail.

P.P.S. It's still Panther Trail even if it's not spelled correctly.

Jim, too real sweet, loving,
best I ever had we met. I really miss I just don't know what I would do without you.

I come to you so sweet every time
by your bright smiling face.
You the best of luck. I am praying for you and I wish
God always be with you.

FIF

I love you,
Carrie
Smith

I'm,
 as a sweet guy in youth, as bad as longer! stay much for me your thanks to some time forget to good.
